

'Near Panic' Buying

Gold Rush Now Stampede

LONDON (AP) — The record rush to buy gold reached stampede levels in the bullion markets of western Europe Friday, reflecting widespread anxiety over monetary values in the wake of the 14.3-per-cent devaluation of the British pound.

Dollar Not In Peril

WASHINGTON (CP) — Firm confidence in the ability of the U.S. dollar to ride out the storm of European gold speculation was declared Friday by the managing director of the 107-nation International Monetary Fund.

Pierre-Paul Schweitzer, in an interview recorded for broadcast by the Voice of America, described as a temporary flurry the rush to exchange dollars for gold in the wake of devaluation of the British pound.

He said it will be overcome by the determination of the financial powers to support the pound and maintain their own currency values.

FULL CONFIDENCE
Earlier, administration officials avowed full confidence that American and world gold resources are ample to protect the dollar from following the pound into devaluation.

Presidential press secretary George Christian told reporters in San Antonio, Tex., that he wanted to underscore assurance that President Johnson would "reaffirm unequivocally" U.S. determination to maintain its guaranteed price of $35 an ounce to anyone wanting to buy gold.

To let the price go higher

In London, gold dealers said buying orders were arriving in "near panic" proportions from all over the world.

Paris reported sales 10 times above normal. (See also Page 5.)

In Johannesburg, stock exchange dealers jostled each other in their efforts to buy gold mining stocks. The scene was described as "near pandemonium." South Africa, as one of the leading producers of gold, would profit heavily if its price rose.

PAPER FOR METAL

The Swiss National Bank advised leading banks to halt temporarily forward sales of gold, for delivery in 30, 60 or 90 days, in a move to protect its supply of U.S. dollars.

The drive for gold was a broad movement to change paper money for the solidity of metal. The price of silver in the London metal market soared to a new high of $2.10 (U.S.) an ounce.

Behind the move appeared to be general uneasiness about the strength of the dollar and speculation that the price of gold may be revalued upward from the $35 an ounce the U.S. government pays.

PRICE STEADIER

In London the international gold pool steadied the metal's price by continuing to supply the bullion market with the gold needed to satisfy all demand. The pool was set up in 1962 by eight nations for this purpose. The United States supplies more than 50 per cent of the pool's needs.

France suspended its role in the pool in June and the U.S. took over its nine per cent share that France held. The other

UN Issues Peace Plea

'BRINK OF WAR'—THANT

From UPI, AP, CP

High winds and low clouds obscured Turkish intentions as dawn broke over the eastern Mediterranean island of Cyprus this morning.

Only mounting waves kept Turkish invasion forces from smashing into this Greek-dominated country. At least that was the general opinion in Nicosia, Athens and in New York where the United Nations Security Council wrangled far into the night on the generations-long problem.

The Cypriots requested the emergency meeting of the Council to stop the Turks from invading. Ambassador to the UN Zenon Rossides declared "It is the knowledge of all governments that this weekend has been fixed for the unlawful invasion . . ."

Shortly after the Council met, Secretary-General U Thant warned that:

"The portents regarding Cyprus are increasingly ominous. Indications at the moment are that Greece and Turkey are at the brink of war over Cyprus."

After two hours of heated debate, the 15-nation council called a recess so members could consult privately on what action to take.

The Security Council met again early this morning after a 3 1/2-hour recess. It issued a statement that called upon all parties to the dispute to abstain from any act that might aggravate the situation and constitute a threat to peace.

The Council also endorsed Thant's efforts in the situation, then adjourned on the understanding that its members should be ready to meet again at any moment.

FOCAL POINT

The dramatic call-out of the Security Council was the focal point of negotiations, however. Thant appealed for the gradual withdrawal of all foreign troops from the island, where Greece and Turkey maintain garrisons.

However, he insisted that the 4,400-man UN peacekeeping force, including 900 Canadians, remain in control.

Thant referred to Greek, Turkish and British garrisons left on the island when it became independent from Britain in 1960. Under the independence agreement, Greece was allowed to station 550 men on the island, Turkey 750. But since then, the Greeks have sent an entire division of 7,000 regulars. In addition, they have command of the more than 10,000 members of the Cypriot national guard.

PRICE OF PEACE

Turkey has demanded the withdrawal of the Greek regulars and the dismantling of the national guard as its price for staying the invasion.

Rossides told the Security Council Friday night that "my country is under imminent threat of attack and invasion by a big and powerful neighbor, Turkey, with whom we wish to live in peace."

Turkey's Ambassador Orhan Erarp quickly replied with a charge that Greece has been taking steps aimed at the annexation of Cyprus.

"The attack on the Turkish Cypriot villages (last week) have been brutal beyond description," Erarp declared.

Greek Ambassador Dimitri S.

Turks Promise Final Solution

ANKARA (Reuters) — Turkish President Cevdet Sunay today sent messages to world heads of state announcing that Turkey has "decided to solve the Cyprus problem once and for all."

As the messages went out, two-thirds of the Turkish Navy was gathered in the Mediterranean between the southern Turkish ports of Mersin and Iskenderun, which lie to the north and northeast of the eastern tip of Cyprus.

Sammy's Turn

Two days after friend Frank Sinatra announced breakup of his marriage, Sammy Davis Jr., said Friday he and his Swedish-born wife, May Britt, have agreed to trial separation. Suicide Trys Growing

'Something Amiss' At Oakalla Farm

VANCOUVER (CP) — A University of British Columbia psychiatry professor says there is something seriously amiss at Oakalla Prison Farm in suburban Burnaby.

Dr. A. M. Marcus, in an interview following an address to University of B.C. law students, said Friday "the fact that three suicides and 143 cases of self-injury were recorded among Oakalla inmates between January and October this year indicate that a closer look at the situation is needed.

Dr. Marcus said he received the statistics from an official assisting S. Rockborough Smith, B.C. director of corrections.

"Self-injury does not necessarily mean suicide," Dr. Marcus said. "But it does include wrist slashings and hanging attempts."

Mr. Smith said Oakalla was built 50 years ago to accommodate 450 prisoners. Now there are 950 men and 100 women being held at the prison.

Pay-Delay $250,000 Holds Bennett Interest

By IAN STREET
Legislative Reporter

When Premier Bennett talks about interest on the late flood control payments from the U.S. under the Columbia Treaty he is discussing a cool quarter million dollars.

At the 6 1/2 per cent interest demanded by the premier, the amount still owing is $244,299.99.

DEMANDING 6 1/2 PER CENT?

This covers the period July 31, when the Duncan dam on the Columbia was under operation, and Nov. 23 when the principal sum of $11,929,031.25 was finally paid. The hold-up was due to failure of Congress to approve the payment by the U.S.

Now there is a possibility that B.C. may demand 6 1/2 per cent

Three Guards Face Charges

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP)—Three guards at Victoria County jail were charged Friday with common assault following an investigation by the Ontario department of reforms institutions into allegations that two prisoners were beaten for refusing to leave their beds at the jail Oct. 24.

interest on the interest that's still owing.

A government spokesman said Friday: "If you accept the claim that interest is owing on the main payment for the period payment was not made, but due, then you automatically must accept the claim for interest on the interest, for the period during which it goes unpaid."

PUSHED WITH VIGOR

External Affairs Minister Paul Martin, acting for B.C. in further negotiations under the international treaty, wired Mr. Bennett Thursday saying the question of interest settlement with the U.S. was being "pushed with vigor" by Ottawa.

Prices Cut On Cars From U.K.

TORONTO (Special)—Price cuts, ranging from $50 to $150, on Austin and MG cars were announced today.

Donald Pocock, executive vice-president of the British Motor Corporation of Canada Ltd., said the reductions resulted from the British devaluation.

"This move will further stimulate sales and is being made even though the full effect of the devaluation is not known at this time," said Pocock.

Savings will depend on the model of car being bought. As an example, the Austin mini-sedan will now sell for $1,485, before taxes and shipping.

More Than a Minimum Christmas

LILLE, France (Reuters) — A document outlining relations between French and English-speaking Canadians was distributed to 4,000 delegates attending a Gaullist party congress which opened here Friday.

The document was said to form the background to what President Charles de Gaulle was expected to say on Canada during a press conference Monday.

The document listed the following points:

● Six million French-Canadians "are living under a semi-colonial regime."

● "By providing that Quebec shall be a bilingual province, the constitution of 1867 ensures a guarantee for the minority while English remains the only official language in the other nine provinces."

● "The nature of the external trade of Quebec is characteristic of a colonized economy, mainly producing and exporting raw materials while importing manufactured goods."

● "Quebec includes 40 per cent of the unemployed of Canada."

Five and a half years ago a family of six left eastern Europe for a bright new future in Canada.

Industrious, careful and thrifty, they arrived in Victoria — father, mother, a six-month-old baby, and three other children, between 7 and 3 years old.

They worked hard in the community, and started buying their own house.

As with many old-country families they didn't believe in credit buying, and soon owned their own furniture. A year ago they bought a used car.

Four months ago, the 35-year-old mother became pregnant, and the girls, now aged 13 and 9 were eagerly looking forward to the birth of a Canadian into the family.

Suddenly, two months ago, everything changed.

The father, a heavy machine operator, suffered a severe mental breakdown and was committed to a mental institution for an indefinite period.

The family was thrown back onto its own resources, without relatives or friends able to assist them.

It was a sad moment for the mother, anxious and uncertain about her husband, as she sat in a Victoria city social workers' office and asked for help to keep the young family together.

The high hopes of that spring in 1962 were dashed, and she was dependent upon the government to help her out of her predicament.

Fortunately, because of past thrift, the family has no debts, and their social assistance income of $200 a month will meet their minimum requirements.

But the term "minimum" does not include a happy Christmas, although some extras can be provided through additional social assistance.

It is up to Victorians to show these new Canadians that they are welcome in the land in which they have chosen to raise their children.

Through contributions to the Colonist 500 Fund they can spread some of the joys of Christmas, and soften the blow fate has dealt the hard-working family.

By Friday the pace of donations to the fund was gaining momentum, with that steady giver "Anonymous" appearing frequently at the counter.

Bear Not There Mainly Hot Air

STILL TRYING: No matter how hard or how often the tactics of the exploiters are publicized, they still manage to get their feet in the doors of some unsuspecting souls.

The latest involves a "free offer of a Smokey Bear" doll with the rider that the person who delivers the gift be allowed to give a brief talk of fire safety in the home.

The writer of the letter I have carries on the sad story — "We didn't even catch on when this creep arrived and said he had just run out of his supply of the toy."

On entry the pitchman asked "for just 30 minutes of your time." The talk lasted 2½ hours and the deal involved a contract for the installation of a series of fire alarm bells at a cost of $400 with the usual "just sign here" clause.

By now most of us are familiar with the plea "anyone can afford this to save the lives of their children tonight."

Somewhere there must be ethical business organizations which offer fire protection for those who feel they need it. There have been few house fires in this city that have cost lives and the fire department is not out pushing people into this type of installation so that we can only conclude this is the usual type of appeal to the emotions of parents.

The easiest way to get rid of this trouble is to decline the toy offer. The bear never materializes, anyhow, so forget it.

STEP OUT TIME: This is the day of the big walk and there is every chance of the Miles for Millions project collecting more than $100,000. Saanich policemen have sponsored a cadet, Paul Bregg, from their department and he is now worth $4 a mile.

My own card is filling up better than a southern belle's dance list at a magnolia ball.

Latest to show confidence in my ability to step out is my own daughter, Grace Sian, who is in for a cent a mile.

The balance of the family is pretty wary and is hanging onto its allowance.

BIG MAN COMING: The recently elected leader of the Tory party will be here early in the New Year.

Robert Stanfield will be in British Columbia for his first official visit but there have been no details of his plans so far.

He will speak to the annual meeting of the provincial association in Vancouver on Jan. 19 and 20 but it is not known if he will visit Victoria at that time.

SUCCESS: Success! Bastion Theatre director Peter Manning made a frantic phone call to his office here from Trail late Thursday. He is out on the road looking for bookings for the Bastion touring show or schools.

He has been to Penitence, Kelowna, Grand Forks and Trail. His dates are all booked to capacity. Mr. Manning is so good a pitchman he has oversold the show and he has not even been to Nelson or Creston. He is now trying to see if the company has any dates open in the spring for more bookings.

This is the company the Canada Council chooses to ignore.

SNAP SHOT: Photographer Robin Clarke got a letter this week from a client in Regina, addressed only to Robin Clarke, Photographer, Victoria.

The mails must get through and it seems they do.

War's Brink

Bitos blamed Turkey for the Cyprus crisis. He said events "are going at a headlong pace."

He offered to co-operate with Thant in his appeal for the exercise of restraint. The task of the council, he said, "is clear—to prevent the use of force."

ROOT OF PROBLEM

Bitos told the council the refusal of the Turkish government to co-operate with the UN in returning joint Greek-Cypriot and Turkish-Cypriot patrols was at the root of the problem.

"We are threatened with the use of force and that threat is about to be put into effect," he said.

Soviet Ambassador Nikolai T. Fedorenko said the Cypriot situation is being inspired by external reactionary forces—particularly by the Greek military junta and the United States.

He appealed to all sides to display a sense of responsibility in the coming days to ease the crisis.

SHOULD WITHDRAW

All foreign troops should be withdrawn from Cyprus and foreign military bases eliminated, he said.

The military coup in Greece last April created a direct threat to the independence and normal democratic development of Cyprus, the Soviet delegate said.

Fedorenko blamed the United States for influencing the Greek officers. Greece itself was firmly in the grip of the U.S. military bases, he said.

Ironically, during the last serious confrontation in 1964, the Russians supported the Greek forces and Turkey got support from the U.S.

CARADON PLEADS

The U.S. and Britain joined in appealing to Turkey, Greece and Cyprus to use restraint and co-operate in efforts to head off a war in the area.

Britain's Lord Caradon and U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg urged the council as well as the governments directly concerned to co-operate in peace efforts.

Goldberg also dismissed the Soviet accusations that the U.S. influenced Greek officers. The charges were figments of Fedorenko's imagination, he said.

The efforts to ease the crisis being made by the United States, the UN and others must go on unimpeded, he added.

A special envoy from President Johnson conferred urgently with Greek leaders Friday to try to head off a Greek-Turkish war over Cyprus. The North Atlantic Treaty Organization sent its secretary-general to try to reason with the two NATO allies.

The capitals of Ankara and Athens were tense. Cyprus itself was reported quiet, but unconfirmed reports reaching Ankara told of a "general mobilization" on the Mediterranean island.

NATO WORRY

Cyrus Vance, former secretary of the army and a veteran troubleshooter for President Johnson, conferred with King Constantine in Athens and then closed himself with Foreign Minister Panayotis Pipinelli.

NATO secretary-general Manlio Brosio planned to fly from NATO headquarters in Brussels to confer with officials in both Athens and Ankara, perhaps to remind them that they are NATO allies whose quarrel could rupture the western defence alliance.

In London, Prime Minister Pearson of Canada expressed the hope that open warfare will not break out between Turks and Greeks on Cyprus.

TANKS RUMBLE

The United States removed 500 American women and children from Cyprus and the first contingents of them began arriving in Lebanon.

Behind the diplomatic maneuvering was the rumble of tanks. Dispatches into Ankara from the border town of Edirne, Turkey, reported 20 Greek soldiers killed when an ammunition truck exploded two days ago.

Greek army units were reported emptying supply bases around Athens and moving the war goods elsewhere. City authorities designated buildings to be evacuated by civilians and turned over to military use in the event of war.

TRAINS HALTED

Railway services between Turkey and Greece were halted Friday night.

Bomb explosions rocked Greek sectors in three Cyprus towns late Friday night but none caused either casualties or any serious damage.

Turkey would hold the upper hand if the present crisis came to a military showdown. Turkey's armed forces are stronger than those of Greece.

Don't Worry About Calories, Know Which Foods Fatten

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: How many calories should a teenager (about 14) get? I'd say I'm moderately active. From my mother's nutrition book for nurse's training it says 2,300 calories. A book I got says 2,000 and in a magazine it said 1,200. Which one?—L.M.

Since the average teenager, or adult, wouldn't know a calorie if one came up and said "hello," there isn't much point in trying to specify the exact calories per day.

I see it happen every day — stout ladies "counting their calories," and eating salad and crackers, and then, after this weight-watching meal, supping it off with 400 calories of dessert! Sometimes they have a couple hundred more calories first, in the form of a teeny-weeny cocktail or two.

I've seen people "count calories" on the basis of so many calories for "one portion of string beans," but they ladle out a portion that a restaurant would charge double for. And then throw the whole counting process completely out of balance by serving the beans in cream, with chopped bacon cooked in it, or almond slices added.

A hotdog or hamburger and some soda pop can, depending on the size, add 300 to 500 calories. And bright teenagers can grab 300 calories from the icebox faster than you can count one-two.

So trying to set down a rigid figure for the number of calories a teenager should eat is a pretty futile endeavor.

Besides that, the figure would have to vary according to how much physical energy the girl expends, how big she is, how fast she is growing, and whether her metabolism is of a type which burns up a lot of energy or doesn't.

Actually, a total somewhere from 1,800 to 2,400 is probably right for most growing girls, but it's an academic number.

The real question is whether the girl is getting pudgy. If she is, she's getting too many calories and had better cut down. The main value of knowing about calories amounts primarily to her knowing which foods are extremely high in calories, so she can avoid them. The actual total per day isn't likely to be known unless she is put under constant supervision and eats or drinks nothing unless it is weighed in advance.

I haven't said anything about getting too few calories, because teenagers usually see to it automatically that they get enough (except for the occasional misguided girls who go on goofy crash diets because they think it will make 'em glamorous). Mostly, they soon get hungry enough to quit that nonsense.

Unless you are starting to get fat, or are a bit tubby already, I wouldn't pay much attention to how many calories you need per day.

STOCKS PLUNGE

The story was different on the London Stock Exchange, which witnessed a further plunge of prices. At the closing, The Financial Times index of 30 industrial stocks was down 7.9 points, at 355.2, from Thursday's closing. The index dropped 17.5 points Thursday—the most severe decline in 5½ years.

The pound, however, remained steady just under its new ceiling of $2.41995 U.S.

The gold rush — as it was immediately tabbed by brokers — started Monday, the first day of stock trading following last weekend's news of Britain devaluing its pound to $2.57 in Canadian funds from $3.

On Monday prices of gold shares climbed sharply while major industrial shares declined. By the middle of the day the trend was reversed. Gold prices started falling back as industrial issues recouped some of their losses.

On Thursday following news of record demand for gold in London and Paris, shares of the gold companies zoomed again. The excitement continued Friday and several brokers said they expect it to resume when stock markets open next week.

In London, the exchange was closed Monday by royal decree to give the business community time to adjust to the devaluation.

BUY DOLLAR STOCKS

When trading opened Tuesday, prices slumped quickly but started to recover almost as fast. At the end of the week, the market ran into some profit taking as speculators who had bought at low prices cashed in their shares but the market generally showed no sign of any special worries about the future.

Shares of North American companies, however, received solid support from investors during the week, indicating many buyers were putting their money into dollar stocks listed on the London exchange.

NEW YORK SLUMPS

New York's market also slumped sharply at the opening Monday, then recovered strongly as investor confidence returned.

Friday, however, prices fell following news of the action in Europe to buy gold. This move was seen as a threat to the value of the United States dollar, driving the price of stocks down.

Brokers were hesitant to predict next week's probable price movements, except for gold mining issues.

"At the first of the week it looked as though investors had taken the news of the pound devaluation in their stride," one Toronto financial analyst said.

"The way the market started to move after that, they might have been scared by the rush for gold in Europe."

"A lot will depend on what happens in New York. If investors there come in with big money to buy stocks, markets around the world — and certainly in Canada — should settle down."

would be a devaluation of the dollar and would disrupt money markets around the world.

Assuring reporters that this would not occur, Christian said: "We believe that the world supply of gold is sufficient in the present situation."

When Schweitzer was asked what might happen to the dollar as a result of the speculative money trading, the French-born head of the global currency pool replied with emphasis:

"Nothing is presently happening to the dollar. I understand that the dollar was very strong in all markets."

NO CHAIN REACTION

Schweitzer said that there had been "no panic chain reaction or other major countries" to devalue their currencies along with the pound.

"The pound, in my opinion, is going to be much stronger than it has ever been since the Second World War."

The fund director rejected the idea that France might have been responsible for the attack on the dollar in pursuance of French President Charles de Gaulle's policy of rejecting American monetary leadership.

HOLDING BAG

The chairman of the House of Representatives international finance committee, Henry Reuss predicted in a statement that speculators who are buying gold will find their dollars will wind up holding the bag.

Gold is becoming obsolete as the international basis for currencies, Reuss said, and when it no longer occupies that role its value will sag to "something much closer to $6 an ounce than to $35."

AMOUNT UNFATHOMABLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Officials at major New York City banks with international operations said Friday the amount of gold being traded in the wave of European speculation is virtually unfathomable.

"There's just no way of knowing," said a spokesman for one key bank, who asked anonymity. "It's a question of how good your leak is."

One private international currency expert, Dr. Franz Pick, estimated that hoarders had bought about 370 tons of gold in the European market, valued at $425,500,000 in the last three days.

LOST $600,000,000 Pick said his European sources had told him speculators bought 150 tons Friday, 120 Wednesday and 100 tons Thursday.

He estimated the United States lost $600,000,000 in gold since the British devaluation of the pound.

Complex Crisis

AS ONE ALARM followed another and Greek-Turkish tensions grew tighter Friday in the mounting crisis over Cyprus, the one hopeful development was the acceptance by the aroused governments in Athens and Ankara of the good offices of Mr. Manlio Brosio, the general-secretary of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. He will attempt to mediate.

But time was running out for the peace-makers. It appeared, as general mobilization was ordered in Cyprus following reported rejection by Turkey of a Greek offer for negotiation.

Adding to the complications of the situation is the question of control of the Greek forces on Cyprus commanded by General Georgios Grivas, one-time leader of the terrorist EOKA which so harassed the British up to the time of their acceptance of independence for the island seven years ago.

Although political affairs are the responsibility of the president, Archbishop Makarios, General Grivas takes his orders from Athens. It is by no means certain that, even with the best will in the world, the president can control the military situation.

It is not clear, at this point, who ordered mobilization: the government in Athens or the republican government at Nicosia.

But it is believed that General Grivas commands at least 10,000 Greek "volunteers" on Cyprus—allegedly brought clandestinely from the mainland—and another 11,000 men of the Greek Cypriot National Guard.

It is this overwhelming military strength in Cyprus that has inspired the threat of a Turkish invasion.

The feverish activity of diplomats in search of a solution is more readily understood when it is remembered that both Greece and Turkey are members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, holding positions of strategic importance on the southeast flank of this 15-nation force.

Moreover, Cyprus is still a member of the Commonwealth of Nations, and Great Britain, jointly with Turkey and Greece, guarantees her integrity and security.

As if that were not enough, under the three-nation agreement by which Cyprus was granted independence—on the understanding its government would not undertake any political union with any other state or accept the idea of partition—Great Britain was granted two permanent military bases on the south coast: Akrotiri, where there are important air installations, and Dhekelia, on Larnaca Bay, a naval establishment. There are some 28,000 British civilian and military personnel in these areas.

Finally, there are the United Nations security forces on the island.

In the past there emerged two principal political problems, the Greek Cypriots' dream of reunion with the homeland (enosis) and the Turkish Cypriots' hope of partition, which would, they believed, give them the protection of their sympathetic mainland brethren. Partition was just as odious a remedy for the Greek Cypriots as was the idea of enosis for the Turkish Cypriots. And although both ideas were ruled out under the terms of independence, neither has been abandoned by their adherents.

Distrust and hatred between the two racial elements of Cyprus, nourished over the years, have exploded the recurring and bloody collisions which even a substantial United Nations peace-keeping force has been unable always to prevent.

But additional United Nations strength and determined intervention in the circumstances seem the only means by which a wider violence can be checked.

Meanwhile, the diplomats are working around the clock.

School Slowdown

IT REMAINS to be seen what the word "essential" means when Premier Bennett says the provincial government will approve only essential, classroom construction while tight money prevails. The department of education will have the final determination of what is required and what is not, and its views cannot be expected to coincide with those of the school districts.

But it is of some encouragement that the premier says that classroom construction worth an unspecified number of millions of dollars will soon be financed from government pension funds. A slowdown but not a freeze seems to be in prospect, and Mr. Bennett surely will be sensitive to public demand if the department's judgment is so restrictive as to jeopardize the proper education of numerous children.

It is perhaps encouraging also that the government is allowing $2 bylaws for school construction totalling $48,375,000 to go to the vote in the December municipal elections so that the districts will be able to proceed with their full building programs if the cost of borrowing comes down. "It might ease at any time," says Mr. Bennett.

How long it will be is, of course, a question neither the premier nor anyone else can answer. But one way of luring a lower interest rate is for government—at all levels—to hold borrowing to a minimum. And as long as the effect on the schools is not too profound, Mr. Bennett can scarcely be faulted for doing just this in the present instance.

As for the advice to school boards that they may, if they wish, proceed to borrow money on their own and without provincial participation or guarantee, this appears to be nothing more than window-dressing. School bylaws are not passed by the ratepayers on this understanding, except sometimes for unshareable items, and it is hardly likely that trustees would be so bold as to take this option.

Parochial CBC

MR. Deachman: . . . The CBC is no longer Canadian—if it ever was Canadian.

An hon. Member: It is not.
Mr. Deachman: It is highly concentrated in Toronto, and that is the most parochial town in Canada. As proof of what I say, consider the public affairs programs on which all those tired Torontoites like Gordon Sinclair, Pierre Berton, Mavor Moore, Nathan Cohen, Patrick Watson, Douglas Letterman, Ross MacLean, and a dozen others I might mention, appear. They ask each other the same old questions week after week and give each other the same old answers. Don't you wish you could pack up the CBC, Mr. Speaker, if only to show that there are other people in other cities of Canada with fresher ideas about public affairs?

A Man and His Music

Dayan Far From Being Premier

Difference Between Cheering and Voting

By DAVID LARSEN from Jerusalem

LAST year, so the story goes, Moshe Dayan was sought out at a party by the United States military attaché.

The aide wished to apologize for his embassy's failure to invite the general to its July 4th celebration. "We had invited you for four years, but you never came," explained the attaché.

"It is your duty to invite me and my right to refuse," came the crusty reply.

The anecdotes about Dayan are endless—how he excavates antiquities without a permit, how he pushes aside a roadblock when he is driving somewhere in a hurry.

And, on the face of it, the Israelis would appear to love it. During the newsreel at a movie theatre, when lacklustre Prime Minister Levi Eshkol comes on the screen, the viewers at their popcorn in silence. If the eyepatched face of Dayan appears, however, the theatre rocks with cheers.

The general's appeal as a war hero and unconventional civilian is undeniable. But Israelis make a careful distinction between cheering and voting.

And the fact of the matter is that at this point, Dayan is as far from being premier of Israel as he has ever been.

There are several reasons for this. The most important is that he belongs to the wrong party.

Three years ago Dayan made a political mistake by following former premier David Ben-Gurion when he broke away from the ruling Mafai Party and formed his own Rafi Party. In the 1965 elections Rafi collected only 10 seats in the 120-member parliament.

Efforts have been made in recent months to bring Rafi back into the fold, along with a third labor party, but little progress has been made.

Observers feel that if things remain as they are and the Rafi slate is headed by Dayan in the 1969 elections, the best it could hope to do—assuming there is still a military climate—is to double its last effort and win 20 seats in the Knesset. Win 20 seats would be grossly insufficient to furnish a Rafi prime minister.

And even if the unlikely were to happen, and Rafi merges with Mafai, Dayan would still have the party leaders to reckon with. Politicians in Israel tend to feel uneasy about the general.

Dayan is a political loner, much to the distress of the Rafi leaders. "He won't pull his oar in organizational work," complained one of them. "He is not at all interested in committee work. He doesn't like to give speeches. He takes shortcuts and consults nobody."

It is said of Dayan that he has many acquaintances, but few friends. On the other hand, Labor Minister Yigal Allon plays the game properly, does his political homework, listens to advice. For this reason, it is Allon (a war hero of 1948) who must be considered the favorite as Israel's next premier if Eshkol steps aside in two years.

Like Dayan, Allon is as yet outside the palace, being a member of the Achdut Haavoda Party. But that group already has a working agreement with Mafai on election lists, and a merger of those two is not unlikely.

Even if Dayan were within the Mafai and were to overcome Allon in an internal dogfight, there is no guarantee that Eshkol, seeing this, would not choose to run again.

Eshkol is a question mark. Following the last election, he had health problems, rumored to be heart trouble. Since the June war, though, the 71-year-old premier has appeared often in public and appears to be in good form again.

He is very much in the saddle in his own party, and if he wants the nomination again two years from now, it will be his. Eshkol, while utterly without charisma, would be heading the ticket of the nation's biggest party, and voters in Israel have great party loyalty.

If there is one thing that would goad him into running again, it would be the prospect of the 52-year-old Dayan as premier. The enmity between the two men is no secret.

Because of the need for a coalition government, Eshkol is forced to retain Dayan in his

From The Globe and Mail

EVER alert to the nation's need of adequate information on how the people feel about the great Canadian issues of our time, the New Democratic Party is about to launch a coast-to-coast survey on opinion.

Volunteer canvassers will be trained in special workshops and then will fan out, 50 men to a riding, to ask questions—not just about the clash between the two linguistic groups but about "the many solitudes, cultural, regional, social and economic, which combine to form a far more complex crisis than our traditional politicians have been capable of recognizing."

Meetings will be held across the country to discuss tabulated results of the survey and then, at a great NDP conference, a declaration of common objectives will be issued. "Before deciding what sort of a constitution we want," says Party Leader T. C. Douglas, "we have to find out what the country needs and wants."

Of course we do. And we wish Mr. Douglas and all his helpers well. Also God speed, which may be more important. There are many Canadians too young to remember, but Canada once sent forth a band of men, with many helpers and much money, in search of only a fraction of the wisdom and knowledge sought by the NDP.

They were supposed to get the answers only to matters relating to bilingualism and biculturalism. Four years and eight million dollars later we are still without a report—let alone a declaration of objectives. But we have learned one thing that Mr. Douglas should remember. It sure is slow-going out there among the solitudes.

Washington Calling

Ground Between Two Millstones

By MARQUIS CHILDS

IN the financial crisis still rocking the markets of the world, reputations are falling like overripe plums. The harvest of the wind of frantic day-to-day improvisation is the whirlwind of a critical reckoning that will bottom out no one knows where.

In all this one of the worst-kept secrets in Washington is the unhappy plight of Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. (Joe) Fowler. He did not want the job, having only had a brief interval in private law practice after a stint as under-secretary of the treasury. But, the last man out of the door, he was grabbed by the president for an office that had been difficult to fill.

A poorly kept secret, too, is Fowler's indifferent qualifications in the field of fiscal and monetary know-how. The secretary is a friendly, compassionate, generous-spirited man. His great recommendation for the job at the time of his appointment in April, 1965, was his ability to work with Congress. A courtly Virginian with a store of anecdotes and humor, he knows on a friendly first-name basis a great many members of Congress.

But this qualification was largely nullified when the president and Chairman Wilbur Mills of the House ways and means committee fell out over a tax increase versus a $5 billion cut in government spending. Fowler has ever since been ground between that upper and nether millstone, a most unenviable position.

The president's wrath has grown as Mills dug in and Congress was plainly not in a mood to talk about taxes. His feeling reached a climax at his press conference a week ago when he predicted with theatrical gestures that Mills would rue the day he resisted the Johnson proposal for a 10 per cent surcharge on corporate and individual incomes. At that moment the British pound was teetering on the abyss, and means markets in London in a panic, and it may have been something less than a wise tactical move to feed the anti-Mills fires.

Fowler, who has a lot of company in this respect, is a victim of timing. The president was being strongly urged in January, 1966, to ask for a tax increase at that point, anticipating inflation to come. One of the stoutest advocates was Chairman William McNichols

Martin Jr. of the Federal Reserve Board.

The Democrats then controlled the House by an overwhelming margin, thanks to the Johnson landslide of 1964. However unpopular a tax increase is under any circumstances, the view of experienced observers was that within six months the Congress would have swallowed the bitter pill. In the November election Republicans made a net gain of 47 seats, and for all practical purposes the administration had lost a hold over the House. The Republicans have insisted that they will not provide the estimated 59 votes needed from their side of the aisle to put over a tax increase until late February or March. It will then have the greatest impact on the presidential campaign.

The president in his dramatic performance at the press conference gave $30 billion to $35 billion as the probable deficit at the end of the current fiscal year without a tax increase. It was the first time a figure of that magnitude had been tossed in and it can hardly have reassured Europe's central bankers anxious over the increasing outflow of dollars. Nor can it have given any comfort to the secretary of the treasury and the budget director. The best estimate is still for a deficit of $22 billion to $27 billion, and while that ain't hay it is less alarming than the president's scare figure.

Despite the handicap of his chronic bladder trouble—he is frequently in pain—Fowler works hard at his job. He was given good marks for his efforts in the conference in Europe to achieve a system of "paper gold" that would augment the present woefully deficient condition of dependence on the dollar and the pound with an inadequate gold backing. To arrive at even a limited agreement was difficult in light of the rising tide of nationalism and the obduracy of the French.

What has been done falls far short of the need. Devaluation of the pound is a kind of desperate improvisation. The effect can at best be temporary. The financial flap makes painfully evident the gap between the propaganda of the word and the propaganda of the deed. Words flung at a stubborn Congress are of little avail. They only make the task of a hard-pressed secretary of the treasury more difficult.

National Broadcasting

The 'New Left' Boys Fight for Power

By LUBOR J. ZINK from Ottawa

EVIDENTLY alarmed by the growing awareness of their scintillating and instituting the new legislation clause by clause, the New Left boys are up in arms, determined to fight for their misuse of the most powerful opinion-moulding instrument in the country.

To succeed, they have to discredit their critics and at the same time assure ineffectiveness of the proposed new broadcasting legislation.

Former Seven Days co-host Patrick Watson seems to be spearheading the hoped-for demolition of the critics, while the main force inside the corporation is attacking the Broadcasting Act.

Watson's mixture of sarcasm with such shopworn left-wing tactics as pinning labels of McCarthyism on the critics is amusing: the attack on the legislation, which confirms what the critics have been saying about the misuse of the CBC for separatist, ideological and moral subversion, is not.

The attack came in the form of a telegram addressed to State Secretary Judy LaMarsh by Claude Sylvestre, secretary of the Association of CBC Producers.

"We take objection to the wording in a law which reads: 'The National Broadcasting service shall . . . contribute to the strengthening of national unity . . . We believe that our prime role, as producers, is to reflect and to interpret the living reality in a country. We do not believe that official government thinking is necessarily the kind of objective thinking which should be the basis of political and cultural information.'"

In other words, the producers are telling the elected representatives of the nation that Parliament has no right to set even broad policy outlines for broadcasting and that they, a handful of CBC employees, must be left absolutely free "to reflect and to interpret" whatever they regard as "the living reality of a country."

(What the producers' concept of the "living reality" happens to be has been amply documented by the steady diet of programs which Erik Nielsen described in the Commons as "an unending parade of drug addicts, Black Power advocates, nihilists, purveyors of filthy literature, Nazis and pseudo-Nazis.")

Dealing with this part of the producers' arrogance, Miss LaMarsh said in her reply to Claude Sylvestre: " . . . No CBC employee has the right to use these (the corporation's) facilities for promulgating his own political viewpoint, no matter what it might be. Nor has any employee the right to use these facilities in a manner subversive to the democratic process."

The broadcasting committee of the House, which has been inscribing the new legislation clause by clause, would do well to inscribe these words in the bill, for such general terms as "balanced service of information" apparently present no obstacle to the self-styled "progressives" who use CBC facilities in a manner subversive to the democratic process.

(In an article he wrote a year ago, Patrick Watson dismissed the requirement of balanced programming as nonsense and said: "A better job to undertake would surely be to destroy or confuse, or upset public opinion.")

It is interesting to note that in their telegram the producers describe themselves as "the Left." After condemning the legislation and accusing Miss LaMarsh of interfering with what now amounts to anarchy within the corporation, they state: " . . . What you are saying is in short that the Left will be tolerated on the condition that it is reactionary." They have thus identified themselves and confirmed charges of left-wing penetration and control of vital sectors of the CBC.

This in itself answers Patrick Watson's attempt to ridicule and discredit critics of slanted and disruptive CBC programs.

An extensive documentation of this criticism was provided by Prime Minister Pearson's parliamentary secretary John Matheson who, after analyzing 499 items that appeared on the 50 Seven Days programs in Watson's CBC heyday, found consistent "distortion and censorship by exclusion."

For example: "Two major programs stressed the delights of drug taking, glue sniffing and LSD, without adequately portraying the serious dangers . . ."

"On 28 occasions Seven Days dealt with religious subjects; 22 of these were sarcastic or antagonistic . . ."

"All 29 items on problems of race played up . . . extremism . . ."

"Some 80 items touched on American subjects . . . 62 were overtly anti-American . . ."

"Sixteen items dealt with the Vietnam war; 15 of these could have brought nothing but comfort and encouragement to Hanoi . . ."

"On 14 programs communism was given sympathetic treatment. Not once in two years was there any substantial criticism of a communist country or of communist philosophy . . ."

And so on. The evidence, which emerged from painstaking research, is overwhelming. Watson's attempt to dismiss it as "unsubstantiated statistics" is "McCarthyist tactics and dishonesty" . . . and employee the right to use these facilities in a manner subver-

Ceylon and China

Rubber for Rice

By K. G. NAVARATNE from Colombo

RED China, after all, cannot do without little Ceylon. And Ceylon, it appears, cannot do without China.

The 700 million Chinese people cannot be trifled with. "Peeking warned Ceylon in a series of recent diplomatic outbursts over alleged affronts to China and its Chairman Mao Tse-tung. It followed this up with a threat to halt the vital rubber for rice trade with Ceylon."

Ceylon curtly rejected all the protests and observers believed a rupture of diplomatic relations was inevitable. But now the two countries have quietly renewed their trade agreement. The simple fact is that, while Malaysia and Indonesia refusing to sell, China has no other place to obtain rubber essential for its development effort.

This is a good thing for Ceylon, with production shortfalls in Burma and Thailand. Ceylon has no other place to obtain the huge quantity of rice—200,000 tons—that China's shulky supplies annually, despite internal food shortages of its own.

As a result, once the pact was in the bag, there was as much relief in Colombo as there obviously must have been in Peking.

Fears that Ceylon would have to find alternative markets to sell rubber and buy rice arose after China fired its first diplomatic broadside on Aug. 15. The Chinese envoy in Colombo alleged that "anti-Chinese elements" had willfully damaged and pilfered a cargo from a Chinese ship in Colombo port, whenever necessary.

The cargo included quantities of quotations and portraits of Mao. This was done "at the instigation and with the connivance of the Ceylon government," he charged, and warned that it constituted "a grave provocation" of the Chinese people.

Three other notes, couched in equally belligerent language, followed. The last one in late September alleged Ceylon was on the way to adopting a "two Chinas" policy and warned it to desist.

The Dudley Sonanayake government summarily dismissed the protests, adding that China's attitude was tantamount to "interference in the internal affairs of the country," an attitude which, it said, could not be tolerated. This only increased Peking's ire and brought forth the threat to halt the trade with Ceylon.

Ceylon's fears were intensified when China delayed to invite a delegation to Peking to discuss terms for next year. Normally, the negotiations begin in early September. This time, the invitations did not come until the last week of October, by which time Ceylon had begun to look for alternate markets.

The rice supply position would have been partly met by a further restriction of consumption and increasing local production. (The target is 70 per cent self-sufficiency by 1970.) But there would have been no buyer at all for rubber at a time when world prices were declining owing to overproduction and increasing competition from synthetics.

The situation was similar to that in 1952. That year, the price of rubber had fallen from a Korean War peak of 66 cents a pound to 32 cents. With the United States stopping the stockpiling of the commodity, Ceylon lost its main buyer—and with it the hope of securing adequate supplies of rice. China cashed in with an offer of rice for rubber.

Since then, China has posed as Ceylon's "savior," claiming to have come to its rescue when its Western friends "failed." Actually, it has secured a strong economic-political lever, which it has not hesitated to use, whenever necessary.

China can again claim to have come to Ceylon's rescue. It has agreed to supply 200,000 tons of rice at $15 a ton, an increase of $30 over last year's price, but still about $14 to $20 below world market prices. And it has agreed to buy Ceylon's entire sheet rubber output of 80,000 tons, paying a premium of two cents a pound over the prevailing Singapore market price.

So China has its rubber. And Ceylon its rice. And to that extent both countries can be happy, whatever their other differences.

Telephones Jammed

Canada Joins Gold Rush

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's chartered banks did a booming business in gold Friday as investors jammed telephone lines and lined up at bank counters to buy it as a bulwark against devalued currencies.

Officials at the Toronto - Dominion Bank said they had traded about $1,000,000 worth of gold and had orders for another $1,000,000 which they were going to the open market to fill.

"Our traders were swamped with calls," an official said. Normally the banks sell little gold. But Friday customers across Canada were telephoning branches, which in turn called the bank's international division with orders.

Toronto - Dominion officials said they had gone to the Bank of Nova Scotia, Canada's large gold-supply bank, to fill some orders Friday, and to the market for others.

"We expect the active trading to continue Monday," a Toronto-Dominion official said. "But we have no doubt we'll be able to fill the orders."

The Bank of Nova Scotia said an unusual number of people appeared at its Toronto head office to buy gold because of the run on the metal in Europe.

A bank official said a lineup started at the office's gold counter as the bank opened its doors and remained through the day. Business was so brisk the gold counter took its phone off the hook.

"At its peak there were about 20 or 25 people in the lineup, but it has varied through the day, depending on when they could get in."

WITHIN LIMITS

He said the price of selling gold to customers is within the limits set by the United States.

The bank gave no figures immediately on prices, however.

The U.S. set the price of gold at $35 in U.S. funds 33 years ago. The recognized selling for normal transactions is $35.1975.

The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce said its market for gold sales had been "extremely active."

PARIS RUSH

He described the activity as a carry over from Europe, where bullion markets in London and Paris were described as the busiest in living memory.

The Imperial Bank spokesman said that all reasonable demands of customers had been met.

Meanwhile prices of gold mining companies climbed sharply on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

The index of these companies, set up by the exchange to measure the price movements, rose 5.96 points to 190.80. During the day it hit a high of 192.41 points.

Now Thomson Can Be Both

LONDON (CP) — A well-informed source said Friday the Canadian government has decided that Canadians who are offered British titles will be able to accept them and still retain their Canadian citizenship.

The informant said this "slightly different situation" arises from the fact that Canada has an honors system of its own—the Order of Canada—and Britain acknowledges that bestowing honors on Canadians would no longer embarrass the Canadian government.

The informant also said that if Lord Thomson, the publisher who gave up his Canadian citizenship to become a British peer, returned to reside in Canada for a minimum period of one year, he could regain his citizenship and still retain his title.

Asked for comment on this latter point, the 73-year-old press baron said he always maintained that he would go back to Canada "eventually" when he decided to retire and he presumed his citizenship would naturally follow.

Thomson's barony is a hereditary title and automatically will pass to his son, Kenneth.

SUCCESS STORY

"You can get a title if your prime minister recommends it to the Queen," Thomson said. "In my case, Pearson wouldn't do it."

Thomson was elevated to the peerage in 1964 after he had given up his Canadian citizenship. In Russell Braddon's biography of the press baron, Thomson is quoted as saying a title "is the best way I can prove to Canadians that I'm a success."

Successive Canadian governments generally have abided by a 1919 Canadian House of Commons resolution, that never passed through the Senate, that no further honors-bearing titles should be recommended. An exception was the 1930-35 government of R. B. Bennett who dubbed six of his countrymen knights and then left Canada to accept a viscountcy in 1942.

Braddon said this "scandal" ensured that no subsequent prime minister ignored the 1919 resolution.

The informant acknowledged that for many years Canadians could not obtain British honors unless they qualified as United Kingdom citizens. Otherwise, a British government could not make a recommendation to the Queen on behalf of such persons.

Now that Canada had an honors system of its own, the informant said, the British government no longer would have to feel it is doing something which is against Canadian policy.

Broadcast Vote Secret

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons broadcasting committee Friday completed its general discussion of the government's proposed new Broadcasting Act. Beginning next Tuesday, it is expected to go into secret sessions to vote on a number of changes proposed by MPs.

Among these changes are:

● Deletion of the section on the CBC to promote national unity. The New Democratic Party MPs say even the political parties can't agree on a definition of national unity.

● A new name for the Canadian Radio Commission which will replace the present regulatory body, the Board of Broadcast Governors. Opponents to the name say it is outdated.

● A cut in the $100,000 fine for private broadcasters who break the new regulations.

● Substituting proposed five-year operating grants to the CBC in favor of grants for three years or less.

Manitoba To Fill Hot Seat

From CP

Two important regional meetings will take place in Canada today.

In Winnipeg, Manitoba Progressive Conservatives will choose a new leader—and succeed a new premier—to replace Duff Roblin, who is stepping up to federal politics. Chief candidates are Attorney-General Lyon, Highways Minister Weir, Education Minister Johnson and Provincial Secretary McLean.

In Fredericton, the annual Atlantic premiers' conference will concentrate on medicare and rail freight rates. Attending will be Premiers Robichaud of New Brunswick, Smith of Nova Scotia and Campbell of Prince Edward Island. Newfoundland will not be represented.

Phone Book Nearly Out

Delivery of the new telephone directory is more than half completed, B.C. Telephone says.

Subscribers in Victoria, the Central Sanich, Sidney, Sooke and the Gulf Islands will receive 93,000 copies by Nov. 30. The new issue has 512 pages compared to 463 last time and 75,000 listings compared to 69,500.

MONTREAL (CP) — Amid boos for Canada and bravos for Quebec independence the Estates General of French Canada voted Friday on a resolution to recognize "the right to self-determination of the French-Canadian nation."

Results of the vote at the privately organized forum to discuss the constitutional position of Quebec are to be announced today, but overwhelming approval is expected, at least from Quebec delegates.

The resolution on self-determination came on the second day of the four-day meeting.

STRIP GOVERNMENT

Several policy resolutions under discussion in workshops gave the meeting an air of nation-building. Many resolutions stripped the federal government of powers and favored "l'etat du Quebec"—the Quebec state.

Jacques-Yvan Morin, president of the Estates General, said he found some resolutions "radical and surprising." He said they reflect "the rapid evolution in public opinion" since the July visit to Canada of French President Charles de Gaulle.

TREATIES TOO

Resolutions under study would give Quebec exclusive powers in broadcasting, immigration and social welfare, establish French-language unilingualism in Quebec, and empower the province to sign international treaties.

The resolution on self-determination, originating in the 33-member council that organized the Estates General, was presented by Francois-Albert Angers, director of the Applied Science Institute at l'ecole des Hautes Etudes Commerciales in Montreal.

DO-OR-DIE

Prof. Angers phrased his appeal for unanimous support in clear-cut do-or-die terms, saying delegates would have no business to be present in such an assembly if they voted against self-determination.

"To vote against the resolution is to deny the existence of the French-Canadian nation," he said. "You cannot reject this resolution without denying your 'raison d'être' and your right to continue to sit as a delegate."

Representatives of the Estates General are elected from organizations such as school boards, professional groups, patriotic societies, trade unions, municipalities and chambers of commerce.

MOST PROVINCES

The organization, founded in 1961, has expanded and now includes delegates from all Canadian provinces except Newfoundland.

Virtually every single supporter of the resolution Friday seemed to interpret it as a step toward Quebec independence. Those opposing the resolution, one Quebecer and three non-Quebecers, were booed and hooted.

Prof. Angers, outlining the purpose of the resolution, said one of the major reasons the Estates General was assembled is that "the French-Canadian people have never been consulted on what kind of political system they want."

No End In Sight Forecast In Home Freeze

OTTAWA (CP) — A background paper prepared for the federal-provincial conference on housing says "tightness" in the housing situation will continue in 1968.

The federal government paper, issued Friday for the conference which begins Dec. 11, says the kind of "massive" increase needed to cut vacancy rates and lower costs "is not in sight."

Housing starts, expected to number 160,000 units this year, would probably continue to improve however.

The Economic Council of Canada has estimated the average annual requirement in the 1967-70 period at 190,000 units.

LONG RUN

A significant increase also was expected in publicly-financed low-income housing starts.

For the long run, the paper says there can be no certainty that private funds will be adequate for future needs despite the NHA rate.

Though marked increases in housing costs since 1965 had generated middle-income concern, "the longer-term prospects are more reassuring."

NEW COSTS

New housing costs had risen about 50 per cent since 1965, mainly because larger houses were being built and land-servicing costs were up. Income had risen 100 per cent in that time.

The prospect of increased house-building in coming years indicated "a corresponding acceleration in land costs." However, incomes also would probably rise.

The prospect for improving housing costs depended "to a significant degree, on the future course of land costs."

PUBLIC CONCERN

There were now 5,500,000 dwellings, nearly half of them fairly new and only one-quarter more than 50 years old. A population of 20,000,000 shared 50,000,000 rooms.

"Widespread public concern about housing," the paper says, arises from the fact that the rate of new construction declined "significantly" in 1966.

This was reinforced by declining vacancy rates and rising costs in the cities.

RESEMBLED

The identity was not verified, through a standard check of fingerprints by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, until Tichenor's body had been buried by Guinn's mother in services near here.

"I went through some other woman's grief," Mrs. Guinn said Thursday. "He (Tichenor) resembled John so much. I brought him home and kept him overnight. Now, another mother will have to go through this."

The army said it "sincerely regrets this error and the resultant heartbreak caused the family of both soldiers." Tichenor's body is being disinterred and will be shipped to Louisville for reburial.

SPEEDUP URGED

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Northwest Territories Council has agreed to petition federal authorities for a speed-up in transferring self-governing powers to the territorial government.

The background paper says the combined effects of economic policy, the re-entry of chartered banks into mortgage lending, and the "virtual freeing" of the NHA interest rate should result in "a significant increase in the flow of private funds into the mortgage market."

Guinn's reunion

Prints Bared Dead 'Double' Error

ELIZABETHTON, Tenn. (AP) — Pfc. John W. Guinn, whose mother thought she buried him last Tuesday, flew home from Vietnam Friday and said he knew the soldier who was mistakenly buried in his stead.

Guinn, 23, of Elizabethton, said he and Pfc. Quinn W. Tichenor, 23, of Louisville, Ky., were in the same company.

*** * ***

"I'm glad they've got it all straightened out now," he said before he boarded a commercial flight at Seattle. He arrived earlier at McChord Air Force Base near Tacoma, Wash., on a military flight.

Guinn said he talked to his mother, Blanche Guinn, by telephone from Vietnam U.S. Thanksgiving Day, but she didn't tell him of the mistake. Until a Seattle Post-Intelligencer reporter talked to Guinn at the Seattle airport, he was unaware of the mistake.

*** * ***

Mrs. Guinn had quoted John as saying on the telephone from Vietnam:

"I'm coming home. I don't know what the deal is, but they're sure getting me out of here fast. I'll be home in 24 hours."

The army said in a statement that two members of Guinn's unit mistakenly identified the body of Tichenor as that of the Tennessee soldier.

The identity was not verified, through a standard check of fingerprints by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, until Tichenor's body had been buried by Guinn's mother in services near here.

"I went through some other woman's grief," Mrs. Guinn said Thursday. "He (Tichenor) resembled John so much. I brought him home and kept him overnight. Now, another mother will have to go through this."

The army said it "sincerely regrets this error and the resultant heartbreak caused the family of both soldiers." Tichenor's body is being disinterred and will be shipped to Louisville for reburial.

Tichenor's widow, Thelma, was notified in Louisville by a chaplain of Tichenor's death and mistaken burial. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Tichenor, also live in Louisville. One of 10 children, Guinn was drafted last April.

China Set for War

Australian Newsmen Warns U.S.

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Australian journalist Wilfred Burchett said in a letter made public Thursday night "all industries and virtually all power stations" in North Vietnam and a third of Haiphong's residential, commercial and industrial sections have been destroyed by U.S. bombing.

Burchett, who often reports for Communist newspapers, wrote the letter from Phnom Penh, Cambodia, Oct. 27 to Richard Hudson, editor of the New York monthly magazine War-Peace Report, who released it to UN correspondents and others.

In a Sept. 15 letter to Burchett on how to get peace in Vietnam, Hudson had told of a theory of a "well-informed Washington source" that in getting ready for the U.S. presidential election next November, President Johnson would try a new offensive in late spring or early summer and, if that failed, "sharply escalate the war as the election approaches."

Burchett gave his account of the bomb damage in challenging this theory. He asked: "What has Johnson left to bomb between now and after summer 'to sharply escalate the war as the election approaches?"

"An invasion of the North? War with China? Would these really be vote-catching moves?" Burchett added that if more U.S. troops were put in than North Vietnam could handle, "there is no doubt at all that China would intervene."

"I was assured at the very highest level during my latest visit to Hanoi — from Oct. 10 to 17 — that, and I quote exactly from my notes, 'China is ready to intervene at any moment.'"

He was told the same thing, he said, on a visit to Peking last

Egypt Wants to Fight, Israeli Minister Says

NEW YORK (AP) — Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban said Friday Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser wants war, not peace in the Middle East.

Eban said at Kennedy International Airport before boarding a plane for home that Nasser's speech Thursday outlining his country's position will make the task of the UN peace envoy more difficult.

He said he believes Nasser's speech was a reflection of Egypt's true policy. "He has made it very clear that his ambition is war and not peace and he regards the present situation as an interruption of his policy of war."

South Wins Battle

Cong Charge with Flame

SAIGON (AP) — Viet Cong troops wielding flame throwers attacked a South Vietnamese Army post 70 miles north of Saigon today in the same area where the Communists staged a diversionary assault Oct. 27 before the big battle at Loc Ninh.

A South Vietnamese military spokesman said the pre-dawn attack was repulsed with 100 of the Viet Cong killed and 39 weapons captured. The spokesman said South Vietnamese casualties were light.

In the central highlands, U.S. B-52 bombers today staged more raids on North Vietnamese escape routes and troop concentrations in the Dak To sector.

Over North Vietnam Friday, U.S. pilots flew to within 15 miles of Hanoi to make radar-guided bomb drops on the Song Dong army barracks. Other planes pounded the Nam Dinh rail yard 40 miles southeast of Hanoi.

Other ground action in South Vietnam Friday occurred to the north of the central highlands. The U.S. command in Saigon revised the estimate of Communist strength in South Vietnam and split its appraisals of the military and political units rated last week to total 297,000 men.

It said 257,000 of these had been considered gun-carrying troops and 40,000 card-carrying Communist party agents. Under the new look, the Communist high command was believed to have from 223,000 to 248,000 troops, ranging from regulars to local guerrillas, and from 75,000 to 85,000 in political cadres.

NATO Makes Plans For Its Future

BRUSSELS (CP) — A plan for the future of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization emerged Friday from a conference of the 15 member nations with the hope President Charles de Gaulle of France will go along with it.

There still are some points of disagreement. They will be presented to French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville and other leaders of the alliance for settlement when they meet in mid-December.

But the broad plan gave hope that France would not withdraw in 1969, when the treaty allows a member to drop out.

The plan as it stands calls for studies on how to get along with the Soviet Union that would go well beyond that date, according to a NATO source.

The source said there was full agreement that consultation within the alliance should be deepened and strengthened.

Devaluation Sparks Race Riot

From AP, Reuters

PENANG, Malaysia — A currency devaluation protest has blown up into one of Malaysia's most serious racial disturbances in three years.

It took a curfew to end a battle between Chinese and Malays in this tourist city Friday during which police said eight were killed and 119 hurt. However, unconfirmed reports put the toll much higher.

In Calcutta, violence and arson still persisted after the end of a two-day general strike Friday which had been marked by widespread rioting, looting and burning.

The strike, mass protests and violence were against the central government's dismissal Tuesday of the Communist-led state government of West Bengal.

Funeral Men Charged

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — The U.S. justice department Friday accused 14,000 funeral directors of conspiring to eliminate competition by not advertising the costs of funeral services.

The civil action was filed in U.S. District Court against the National Funeral Directors Association of the United States, which has its national headquarters here.

BURIAL COST

Names as co-conspirators were local funeral directors' associations affiliated with the national group.

Attorney General Ramsey Clark said there were more than 25,000 funeral directors in the U.S. who conduct more than $1,600,000,000 worth of funerals annually, exclusive of the cost of burial plots, shipment of bodies and flowers.

The national association, Clark said, conducts 75 per cent of these funerals.

COURT PLEA

Clark asked the court to order the national group and other alleged conspirators to eliminate all provisions that limit or restrict advertising of the costs of funeral services.

He also asked that the parties drop the provision which excludes from association membership any group which does not abide by the advertising restrictions.

PHONE TALKS

Howard Raether, executive secretary of the national group, had no immediate comment. He said he knew of the complaint only through calls from newsmen. Raether said the complaint would be discussed by the association's executive committee in a national telephone conference.

Clark said the actions of the association had been going on since 1942, and were in violation had been going on since 1942, and were in violation of the restraint-of-trade section of the Sherman Anti-trust Act.

Wilson Admits Pound Mistake

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Wilson admitted Thursday night that his government's biggest mistake was to underestimate the factors that led to the devaluation of the pound.

"Our biggest mistake was to underestimate the power of speculation at home and abroad to put the pound in jeopardy," he said. "We have now learned that lesson."

Much of the blame for the 14.3-per-cent devaluation Saturday, he said, originated with the Arab-Israeli war in June.

He said the old pound lacked sufficient leeway to meet the Middle East crisis and the run on the pound.

Wilson said he did not believe the government ought to be "re-constructed" because of devaluation and that Britons generally agreed that devaluation was the proper move.

"I believe it was right to fight to hold parity, but we reached a point where we had to devalue Saturday," he said.

EDINBURGH (CP) — The Scotch Whisky Association is still considering whether to set new prices as a result of the 14.3-per-cent devaluation of the British pound, a spokesman said Friday.

"Various proposals are under consideration and we have no announcement to make at present," he said.

"It may be that there will be an increase announced in the next few days, but at the present time we have made no new recommendations to members."

Hooke Testifies:

Health Wasn't Discussed

EDMONTON (CP) — A. J. Hooke, Alberta welfare minister, told a judicial inquiry Friday that an Edmonton alderman's testimony must have been a figment of his imagination.

Ald. Ed Leger told the inquiry four weeks ago that Hooke called on him June 22, 1964, and offered "help politically." If he would support a land exchange between the city and Ideal Homes Ltd., a company with which Hooke was associated, Leger testified Hooke told him of financial difficulties and ill health "to win my sympathy."

NOT HEALTH

Hooke said Friday he did not discuss his health with Leger. "That's a figment of his imagination," he was asked. "It certainly is," he said.

The minister also said he did not offer to help Leger at all, and told the alderman, "please don't look at this (conversation) in any other way than as (my) asking you to know the facts."

He said he thought Leger should know where the land in question was located. He had called on the alderman because of a newspaper report that Leger had told city council Hooke "was trying to trade off to the city an old moose pasture for some first-class land in northwest Edmonton."

Hooke said he did not discuss his debts or cry at the meeting, as Ald. Leger testified he did.

COMPANY LIABILITY

He had dissociated himself from Ideal Homes in 1955 because he felt he was a liability to the company in its efforts to obtain compensation for a series of land transactions with the city.

"I had come to believe that perhaps there were some political reasons that the company was not succeeding."

The inquiry is investigating allegations made during the last session of the legislature by Garth Turcott, then New Democratic Party member for Pincher Creek-Crowsnest, that Hooke and former provincial treasurer E. W. Hinman used or attempted to use their public office for personal gain.

LITTLE ACTION

Hooke said Ideal Homes took little action in its dispute with the city from 1955 to 1964 because he was a minister of the crown.

W. B. Gill, counsel for Turcott and NDP leader Neil Reimer.

Labor Suffers Heavy Defeat

DERBY, England (AP) — Prime Minister Wilson's Labor party has suffered a stunning defeat in the first by-election since devaluation of the pound.

The Conservatives doubled their general election margin in holding the seat at West Derbyshire. Labor dropped from second to third place behind the Liberals. An independent finished a poor fourth.

If the news wasn't painful enough for Wilson, he heard it on his way to the dentist's for an extraction.

And The Daily Mail published results of a poll saying 54 per cent of voters questioned in the county thought the government should quit and call a new general election.

The winner in West Derbyshire was James Scott-Hopkins who polled 16,319 votes compared with 5,284 by Labor's Robin Corbett. Liberal Aza Pinner polled 5,696 votes.

Scott-Hopkins fills the seat vacated by Aidan Crawley, who won in March, 1966, with a 4,592-vote margin over Labor. Crawley resigned to become a television executive.

FOG CUTS TURNOUT

The hoof-and-mouth epidemic and dense fog kept the rural constituency's total vote Thursday to 64.5 per cent of registered voters. But those who made it cast a 13-per-cent swing to the Tories, which, if reflected in a general election, would mean a Conservative landslide.

In 12 by-elections since the last general election, Labor has defended nine seats and lost six of them.

Lawyer Heard Three Times From Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP)—Montreal lawyer Pierre Lamontagne testified Friday two executive assistants and the prime minister's MP-Parliamentary assistant made phone calls three years ago "pressuring" him to agree to bail for narcotics smuggler Lucien Rivard.

He said at the trial of Raymond Denis that he became so "apprehensive" after getting the calls he reported to the RCMP that Denis had offered him $20,000 more than a month previously in the Rivard case.

Denis, former executive assistant to the federal immigration minister, is charged with attempting to obstruct justice by trying to dissuade Lamontagne from opposing bail for Rivard.

At the time, Lamontagne was lawyer for the United States government in legal steps in Montreal to extradite Rivard from Canada for trial in the United States.

NOT NAMED

In his testimony Friday Lamontagne did not name the three telephone callers.

"The accused was not one of them," Lamontagne testified. His mention of the "pressuring" calls arose when Crown Attorney John Cassella asked him to explain the delay in his reporting the $20,000 offer to the RCMP August 11. Lamontagne has testified Denis made the offer July 14, 1964.

NUMBER OF CALLS

"I got a number of phone calls from persons, 'in authority', in government asking me and pressuring me to give bail to Rivard," Lamontagne said. Asking for their positions, he said "two executive assistants and there was an MP, parliamentary assistant to the prime minister."

"I got to the point where I was apprehensive about the whole matter," he said. He discussed it with his boss, lawyer Tony Geoffrion, and "Mr. Chasse," who was the U.S. officer in charge of the Rivard case. Both men "told me I had to go to the RCMP."

RUMORS RAMPANT

Lamontagne said he hadn't intended reporting the $20,000 offer but the calls came about the time rumors were going around Montreal courts that he had taken a bride.

"A number of things grabbed me at the same time," he said. Denis had asked him July 14, 1964, to keep the offer confidential before he had made it.

Defence counsel Louis Assaly suggested Lamontagne's own federal legal work as RCMP prosecutor for Montreal narcotics cases was "lucrative."

BIRD ACT

Lamontagne replied he wasn't interested in the money, his office in fact lost money on his work in those cases. His interest was in the court experience since he had been only a few years out of law school.

Assaly suggested it was more lucrative than federal prosecutions "for example, under the Migratory Birds Act."

Lamontagne acknowledged this and Crown Attorney Cassella mused aloud: "I suppose Rivard and Bonanno (Mafia chief Joe Bonanno deported in July, 1964) could be classified as migratory birds."

World Reds to Meet

Russians Want China Expelled

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union Friday announced the start of a new move to kick Red China out of the world communist movement.

The Soviet news agency Tass said 18 communist parties from around the world have agreed to a "consultative meeting" in Budapest next February to discuss the formation of a world communist "summit" that would take up the China question.

The 18 parties were the same which held a similar consultative meeting in Moscow in March, 1965.

CAMP SPLIT

That meeting came to nothing because of widespread opposition to a move against Peking which could have brought the split in the communist camp obviously into the open.

In the 18 months since the Moscow meeting, the Kremlin has been circulating allegations that the Chinese are hurting the communist war effort against the United States in Vietnam.

These charges reached a peak Thursday with twin attacks on China in the nation's largest newspapers, Pravda and Izvestia.

The attacks were accompanied by criticism of such fence-straddlers on the China question as Romania and Yugoslavia.

WIDE SUPPORT

Tass claimed the anti-Peking move enjoyed widespread support. It said a large number of "communist and workers parties" advocated an international meeting "with the object of strengthening the unity of the communist movement and also for rallying all socialist democratic forces in the struggle against imperialism."

The 18 communist parties involved are those of Argentina, Australia, Brazil, Britain, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Hungary, Finland, France, India, Italy, Mongolia, Poland, Syria, the Soviet Union, the United States and West Germany.

Alberta Slopes Provide Fun for Families and Challenges for ExpertsSkiing in the Rockies Offers Variety, Thrills and Beauty

Skiers take advantage of new fall of snow at Sunshine Village, Alberta.

Variety is what you get when you ski the Canadian Rockies in Alberta.

There are marvellous slopes on steep Graftonstair Ridge at West Castle. You can take your family for the family ski-weeks at Pigeon Mountain; you can swoosh through deep powder at Sunshine, and rise above the clouds in the Lake Louise Sedan lift to spend hours touring the fantastic Skoki trail. After a full day of skiing on Mount Norquay, you can relax outside in the hot mineral pool.

A day skiing where the trails seem to melt into the sky? You are on Marmot Basin. And if you are especially adventurous, you might trek into mysterious Tonquin Valley or the Maligne Lake area.

Although these last two districts are not yet developed ski areas, the potential is great. Skiing on the glaciers, too, is possible for experts, but only under skilled supervision.

Mount Norquay is famous for its two-mile downhill course, with a shift 2,000 foot drop; its modern electric 3,240 foot double chairlift and the Olympic standard jump and judges stand.

Excitement starts right on the highway at Lake Louise, with the lower terminal of the Sedan lift just off the traffic lanes of Highway No. 1. From the upper terminal several more lifts link together two distinct regions for a 10-mile downhill circuit.

There is a new 7,000 foot Olympic chairlift, with a vertical rise of 2,101 feet and a lift capacity of 800 skiers per hour. Marmot Basin, Pigeon Mountain, West Castle and Whistler Mountain are all serviced by several ski lifts and this year Marmot Basin is installing a new chairlift.

Sunshine Village, a 14-mile ride from Banff, has ski areas that rise to 7,300 feet. The lifts and slopes of Wah Wah Ridge, Standish and Strawberry are delightful.

Two areas outside the national parks, but still in the Rocky Mountains, are Pigeon Mountain and West Castle.

West Castle is the newest of Alberta's ski areas and is being developed at a rapid pace. It is in the southwest corner of Alberta, almost on the Great Divide. It is one of the few districts in North America where skiers may ski the entire mountain from peak to valley floor.

Two Jerseys Join The Cream

Two Saanich cows have won recognition from the Canadian Jersey Cattle Club for milk and butterfat production.

Glenhagan North's Patricia II, a Jersey bred and owned by R. L. Mutre, 1583 Mount Newton Cross Road, has been issued a lifetime production certificate.

In nine lactations the cow produced 83,483 pounds of milk and 4,116 pounds of butterfat. She also won a Ton of Gold certificate.

Warwick Blondie's Vicky, a Jersey in the herd of J. A. Wright, 2869 Lamont, has been issued a Ton of Gold certificate.

In 1,333 days she produced 2,352 pounds of butterfat. To qualify for this award a cow must produce 2,000 pounds of butterfat in four consecutive years.

"Our two boys, both college age, are determined to do two months in Europe next summer. We will help - some. Can you advise the best way to do it?"

The best combination would be bicycles and Eurailpasses. The Eurailpass comes in various sizes - length of time and price. A little over $100 each would give them almost unlimited mileage during the summer. They put themselves and bikes on the train. They find a place they want to get off and stay awhile. Then go on again.

You must buy the Eurailpass from a travel agent here. Not for sale in Europe. Bikes can be bought or rented anywhere in Europe.

"Would we be foolish to think the boys can do this on $10 a day each? (For living expense)."

That's too much according to my young researchers. My youth travellers say $5 a day is ample. And that it can be done on $2 to $3.

Five lifts, including a double chairlift rising 1,300'. Day lodge, coffee shop, ski shop, petrol and ski school.

SUNSHINE VILLAGE (ALTITUDE 7,200')

A slice of ski heaven 14 miles south of Banff townsite. Sunshine had 229 inches of snow last year. Four runs for beginners, seven intermediate and four expert. Three lifts—a double-chair and two T-bars. Accommodation right in the village. There's entertainment, a dining room, cafeteria, ski school and petrol, a sport shop, and (if your accommodation is in Banff) bus service from the parking lot.

LAKE LOUISE (ALTITUDE 7,200')

Here the action starts right on the Trans-Canada Highway, at the lower terminal of the Whitehorn Sedan Lift. Skiers and seers are carried high above the famous lake to the upper terminal where more lifts rise to the upper slopes. Seven different lifts serve two ski areas here—Whitehorn and Mount Temple, which are linked together by a ten-mile downhill circuit. Two beginners' runs, six intermediate, three expert. Ski school, ski shops, ski tours, petrol, accommodation, entertainment—and 118 inches of powder.

PIGEON MOUNTAIN, CANMORE

Just outside the National Park, but close to Banff. Three beginners' runs, three intermediate and one expert. Three pomas, day lodge, free nursery, ski school, petrol and shop.

Rental equipment is available at all areas, and you can rent skinned cars at Edmonton, Calgary, Banff and Jasper, with ski-rack, snow tires, chains—the works.

Ski Monday-to-Friday At Special Low Rates.

A wide range of accommodation at all prices.

Plenty of space on the slopes—no waiting at lifts.

Bring a camera—the "skinery" is superb, and there's unlimited scope for exciting action shots, both movie and still. Curling and skating are available too, so even if you don't ski, you'll find lots to do all day and plenty of apres-ski activity after dark.

BEHIND THE GLASS

By Jim Tang

SIMPLE SOLUTION. One of the more vexing problems for most curling clubs in December and January are club playdowns. Each club has to declare a winner in the men's women's and mixed-rink competitions which lead up to Canadian finals, and it adds up to a draw-out headache.

It often starts with argument about whether the playoff should be a round-robin or a double-knockout affair. Once that has been decided, ice time has to be found and the problems have really begun.

This is difficult at best without badly disrupting busy schedules, and the problem is further complicated because there are invariably rinks in each competition who request postponements or other dates than scheduled. There is always some rink member who has to work on at least one of the nights he, or she, is scheduled. Or someone is out of town, has rimp lyeau ghac id chrd mfwy mfwy mmmmmf mmmmmf to attend a wedding, a dance or a night-school class or has just simply caught a cold.

The result is that club playdowns are seldom decided in less than two weeks, often extend four weeks or even longer. After they are over, there is a weekend to declare the South Island winners, another weekend for the Island zone finals, a third weekend for the Pacific Coast Curling Association final and a fourth weekend for the provincial final.

It has been a tedious, interest-killing procedure and South Island curlers have finally acted to do something about it with a plan that is both simple and sensible.

The four South Island winners this season in both the men's and mixed-rink playdowns will be decided over one weekend. Rinks from Duncan, Victoria and Allan's Curling Clubs, the Victoria Racquet Club and Esquimalt will go directly into the South Island final, playing in a double-knockout bouspiel in which the finalists from "A" and "B" events qualify for the Island final against the four North Island survivors.

Advantages are obvious. Curlers will know in two days at the most whether they have managed the first step on the playdown trail, clubs won't have to scramble to find ice time over an extended period and, also important, the instant playdown will have impact.

WHEN AND WHERE: The mixed-rink playdowns are scheduled at Allan's on Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 16 and 17, and the men's playdowns will be at Esquimalt Municipal Centre on Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 6 and 7. If the entry in either event is too large to complete play in two days at the clubs chosen, games will be scheduled at other clubs in the Greater Victoria area.

Entry fee in both competitions is $20 a rink and the full amount must be paid by the deadline dates — Dec. 10 for the mixed-rink competition and Dec. 15 for the men's playdowns — before an entry will be accepted.

The Island mixed final will be at the Victoria Curling Club Jan. 27 and 28. Two rinks will carry on to the PCAA final at the Vancouver Curling Club Feb. 10 and 11, the PCAA champion will go to Kimberley for the provincial final on Feb. 13 and the provincial champion to the Canadian final in Winnipeg starting March 12.

Nanaimo will host the men's Island final Jan. 20 and 21, the PCAA playoff will be at the New Westminster Curling Club the following weekend, the provincial final at Vancouver's Pacific Curling Club on Feb. 12 and 13.

From there, it's the Canadian final in Kelowna starting March 4. And that brings the suggestion for the many contemplating the chance to watch the Brier playdowns that it is time to arrange for accommodation. There is a lot of it in the Okanagan but it'll be a lot harder to work out of Kelowna.

START MADE: Due in large part to the efforts of Nanaimo's Harry Shyska, a Vancouver Island men's curling league is in operation with rinks from eight clubs — Alberni Valley, Comox Valley, Nanaimo, Duncan, Qualicum, Long Beach, Allan's and Esquimalt taking part.

Play started in Nanaimo on Oct. 10 and rinks have been playing two games each Sunday for the past five Sundays. Not all clubs are represented by the same number of rinks but Alberni Valley, with seven wins in eight games, leads with a .875 percentage. Nanaimo rinks are 18-10 for .643, Allan's are 6-4 for .600, Duncan's are 5-5, Comox Valley is 4-6, Esquimalt 3-7, Qualicum 2-8 and Long Beach 1-5.

This season's play is just a trial run and it is likely the format will be changed if enough clubs show interest. The aim is to set up a class "A" league which would take in the best rinks from every club and set up a regular schedule of Sunday games. Shyska feels that the league would not only give playoff rinks the kind of competition they need but would set up a keen inter-club rivalry which would be of even more benefit.

EXTRA END: Duncan's Glen Harper will still have Harvey Hodge to throw third rocks when he starts trying for his third trip to the Canadian men's final but has a new front end. Bob Pell will be throwing second rocks and youngster Wayne Bruce will lead off. Bruce, incidentally, is the son of Gil Bruce, who played a lot of wartime baseball here for the Navy team. Harper will try for the P.C. mixed-rinks championship with the same lineup which won for him two years back — wife Marg and By and Vera Wilson. . . . manager-secretary Len Hobbs of the Qualicum club reports his club now has 272 members and, counting the 40 student quartets, has 140 rinks curling in scheduled league play. . . . the Qualicum men's bouspiel is Jan. 25-28 and this time it will have five events, two on one side and three on the other with two open events. Entry fee is $40 and the entry limit, which is already half way towards being realized, is 32 rinks. . . . men's rinks from Allan's and Esquimalt clubs have been playing two games every Saturday, alternating between the clubs. Esquimalt is 11-9-1.

Claremont Harriers Keep Eaton Trophy

By DOUG YEARWOOD

Depth won for the Claremont cross-country runners Friday as they slipped by Oak Bay, 44 to 46, to retain the Lower Island cross-country championship and Eaton Trophy at Victoria High School.

Although Dave Weicker of Oak Bay romped around the 3.5 mile course in 16:56 to cross the finish line first just ahead of team-mate Gordon Ackerman, close team running by the Claremont squad provided the difference.

TEAM MEMBERS

Jim Barker was the first Claremont harrier across the line in fifth place just behind Mt. Douglas' Wayne Morrison and Brian Harding of Oak Bay. Claremont's position was ensured by the sixth, eighth, eleventh and fourteenth placings of Jim Cunningham, Dale Stewart, Bruce Beaveridge and Robert Irving, respectively.

Mt. Douglas was third in team standing with 69 points, ahead of fourth place Victoria High (81) and Esquimalt (104). In the girls' event, the lone

North Shores No Pushovers

North Shore have only won two of 10 Inter-City Junior Men's Basketball League games so far this season but Moe Turner's Victoria Chinooks won't be taking any chances when they host the mainlanders today and Sunday.

Shores, who dropped a 47-68 decision to CYO Saints on Thursday, have given both the co-leaders CYO and IGA more stiff battles before losing out in the final few minutes.

Chinooks have been playing hot and cold on alternate days and the Shores could take advantage of any letdown and pick up a win.

Reaction Mixed to Threat Of Negro Olympics Boycott

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A threat by Negro athletes to boycott the 1968 Olympic Games in protest against racial injustices brought mixed reaction from other Negroes Friday.

Harry Edwards, teacher of sociology at San Jose State College and former athlete there, said 60 to 80 sports figures attended a Thursday meeting in Los Angeles and unanimously endorsed a boycott.

Olympic gold medal winner Ralph Boston, holder of the world record in the long jump, said in Nashville, Tenn., the proposed boycott "doesn't make sense."

In Washington, D.C., Norvell Lee, who won a gold medal boxing at the 1952 Olympics, said: "I don't know who the people are behind the boycott, but they don't realize what they're doing at all. The young athletes are ill advised."

"Athletics is the only field in which the Negro has been treated well . . ."

Chasius Clay, who won an Olympic boxing gold medal in 1960, said:

"Giving up a chance at the Olympics and a gold medal is a big sacrifice. But anything they do that's designed to get freedom and equality for their people, I'm with 1,000 per cent."

Jesse Owens, who won four gold medals in the 1936 Berlin Olympics, criticized the threatened boycott.

"I deplore the use of the Olympic Games by certain people for political aggrandizement," he said in Chicago.

In New York, Arthur Lentz, executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee, said "the officers and committee members . . . represent being used as an attention-getter on a matter how worthwhile the cause may be."

Cougars' Goalie Hopes for Help

Victoria Cougars will be relying heavily on goalkeeper Murray Finlay tonight when they try to move out of a tie with Kelowna Buckaroos in the B.C. Junior Hockey League cellar.

Cougars meet the sizzling Pentiction Broncos, who defeated Kamloops, 5-3, Friday, in Pentiction, tonight at Memorial Arena starting at 8:30 p.m.

Victoria has been winless in its last six starts and were overtaken by Kelowna last night when the Buckaroos tied, 4-4, with Vernon at Kelowna.

The one bright light for Cougars during their dismal slump has been the tremendous play of the hard pressed Finlay

The victory was Kings' third in a row and extended their Western Division lead over Philadelphia Flyers to three points.

Centre Eddie Joyal of Los Angeles scored the only goal of the first period and Smith made it 2-0 before veteran American League star Art Stratton notched his sixth and seventh goals of the season to even the count.

Smith put the Kings back in front before the second period ended and Brian Campbell and Terry Gray ran the count to 5-2 before Bob Dillabough's shot during a goal-mouth scramble eluded goalie Wayne Rutledge.

Only 6,406 fans watched the game.

Oak Bay High Swimmers Win 17th Straight Crown

Oak Bay led all the way Friday at the Crystal Garden to capture the Victoria Inter-High School Swim Meet and the Sir Edward Beatty Trophy for the 17th consecutive year.

The powerful Oak Bay team slipped slightly from last year's 207 points, finishing with 174, but was well ahead of second-place Esquimalt which amassed 124½ points.

Belmont scored 46 points, St. Ann's Academy 37½, Victoria 37 and St. Louis College 13.

Oak Bay won 11 events compared to 13 out of 20 last year and swimmers set seven records, four less than in last year's assault.

Sue Litvin of Oak Bay and Vito Dunford of Esquimalt were the only double winners in the individual events and each set a record.

Miss Litvin won the novice freestyle and splashed the novice backstroke in a record 39.7 seconds.

Dunford was involved in the closest race of the meet, edging Pat May of Oak Bay in the boys' individual medley where both were timed in 2:41.4 and he set a record of 31.9 in the open breaststroke.

Ross Bruce of Oak Bay trimmed almost two seconds off his old record while winning the open butterfly in 25.6.

Chris Baleman of Esquimalt lowered the novice freestyle mark to 27.5, Rick Gill of Oak Bay set a mark of 37.7 in the novice breaststroke and Dave Cruise of Oak Bay swam the open freestyle in the record time of 24.1.

Oak Bay's girls medley relay team set the other record, covering the 200-yards in 2:17.3. Victoria was the last team to defeat the champions, accomplishing the feat in 1950.

Eastern Nationals Squeeze By Sweden

GAELT (CP-AP) — The Canadian Nationals edged Sweden, 2-1, Friday night, avenging a 6-2 defeat in the Swedish capital of Stockholm Wednesday night at the start of their European exhibition hockey tour.

The Canadians, from the eastern division of the national team, overcame a first-period deficit with two second-period goals.

Derek Holmes, 28-year-old centre who helps coach the team's younger members, scored the first Canadian goal at 3:30 of the second period.

The second Canadian goal was notched at 5:54 by forward Ken Laidlaw, 22, who attends the University of Ottawa.

Haakon Wickberg tallied for Sweden.

The Canadians now fly to East Germany where they will play the East German Nationals Nov. 26-28. They then play a series in Moscow Dec. 1-10.

A lot of whiskies pretend to be rye.

We don't pretend. Because we are rye.

All Rye.

Don't let anyone kid you. All Canadian whiskies are nicknamed "rye". But most are made from corn, even when they say rye on the label. Alberta Distillers doesn't keep a kernel of corn in the place, because we believe in the clean, g-e-n-t-le taste of an all rye, like Alberta Premium.

Old Friends Meet for Birthday

Belmont Avenue United Church 76 years later

THE VOICE OF ONE

By REV. DR. FRANK S. MORLEY

Faith is having such a hard time of it these days that many people will not be in the mood for the Advent season.

That earth is so near to heaven that men may hear angels sing or be led by a star to the birth place of a child, or of a Virgin seems like ironic nonsense to the disillusioned.

The "Death of God" teaching has transformed "the theology of crisis" of a generation ago to the "crisis of theology" today. The denigration of symbol, the loss of divine transcendence and the spiritually empty universe have resulted in a cultural and psychological revolution in the life of man. The demaying decision of the Episcopal General Convention on the Bishop Pike issue that there is no such thing as heresy, but only some amorphous substance called "continuity" destroys the integrity of the church's faith.

It is not far removed from Marshall McLuhan's contention that "value is irrelevant" in the modern world and anyone who talks about values is not a serious character.

Death Welcome

How then can we decide what makes life worth living? Joseph Wood Krutch, for example, that happy humanist of yesterday, in an article in the New York Times Magazine, says death to him would be a welcome boon! He despairs that technology will control the horrors of war, pollution, and smog.

He deplors the fact that mankind, with all its achievements in speed, power, and wealth, has done little to attack the problems which rob life of grace and joy. Billions are spent to put men on the moon, but nothing effectively done to stop speeding automobiles. The healthfulness and beauty of the countryside are being destroyed.

Krutch asks whether the destruction of populations by plagues who cannot see what they are doing is not as dreadful as pillage by the Crusaders who saw the women and children through whom they ran their swords.

He belongs to a multitude of observers who fear the destruction of the inner life, the loss of freedom, and the control of man by forces outside himself. They fear the menace of a corporate fortress society formed from the military industrial complex. Indeed an article by Kildore Dobbs in Saturday Night declares that "America will be disintegrated — to die — before it's possible for us to become human again."

War Cost Zooms

Race riots, problems of the cities and especially the Vietnam war have filled the once optimistic America with sad pessimism. U.S. expenditures increased from $6,000,000,000 on the war last year to $22,000,000,000 in 1967 and military experts believe that the armed forces there will have to be tripled to assure "victory."

Missions are having a difficult time. Nationalism in many countries including India makes it a real problem to get new workers on the field except as specialists who cannot be found in the country. Missionaries now are called "field advisers" to meet the nationalist prejudice against foreigners.

Can we then share the spirit of Advent?

Not only that, but we can look forward to a new Advent. Credits are never conceived in academic ivory towers. They are born in the bloody sweat of Gethsemane and the anguish of Calvary.

Faith in God comes from the dark hours, when the ruins of life outside Him lie around us. The pride of man is destroyed in the judgments of God. Man must believe that these are either days of doom or salvation.

I believe that the secret of history consists in the plan of God whose purposes at last are fulfilled in grace and glory.

Printers Meet

Press Talks Resume Production Slows

VANCOUVER (CP) — Contract talks are scheduled to resume this morning between officials of Pacific Press Ltd. and four unions representing 400 production employees.

Both sides reported good progress following an afternoon negotiating session Friday.

Pacific Press prints the morning Province and the evening Sun.

Production of the Sun was delayed Friday when printers stopped work for a 37-minute union meeting. The newspaper published only one edition instead of the usual three.

The Province, which normally prints three editions, put out only two on Friday, following a 70-minute meeting of printers Thursday night.

Four of five unions at Pacific Press have served strike notice, without setting a walkout date.

Long Service Honored

Three staff members of the federal Forest Research Laboratory, each with more than 25 years of employment, have received awards commemorating their long service.

They are office manager Joyce Dixon, entomologist Don Smith and Vern Phelps, who is head of the laboratory's soils and fire research group.

Concert Today

Organist Picks Exciting Music

One of the most dramatic works written for the organ — the Allegro from Reubke's Sonata on the 94th Psalm — will be played by Donna Douglas in a recital at 12:15 p.m. today in Christ Church Cathedral.

In addition to this demanding and exciting work, Miss Douglas will play a Purcell Fanfare, Bach's Prelude on All Glory, Laud and Honor and his great Fantasia in G.

On the same program, soprano Laura Groos will sing two arias by Bach and two by Dvorak. A student at the Victoria School of Music, Miss Groos has won many awards and last year studied with Sandoz of Switzerland.

Miss Douglas has won two major awards from the school of music and was winner of the senior organ class in this year's music festival.

Churches Lose Discount

TORONTO (CP) — A new general service hydro rate, adopted by 40 of Ontario's 54 municipalities, has increased hydro costs to churches. The new rate puts churches on an equal basis with commercial ratepayers, ending a system that gave churches 50-per-cent discounts in municipalities which approved the discount. It has been estimated the new rate could increase churches' hydro bills by less than $2 monthly.

If They Come

Students Poised For Dow Row

By STEVE HUME

Dow Chemical of Canada may not recruit University of Victoria chemistry graduates on campus this year, but students are organizing protests just in case.

The university's Student Placement Office reported Friday that "not many" chemistry students have signed up for job interviews with the giant corporation which is scheduled to send a representative to Victoria Wednesday.

Officials said that, unless greater numbers of students request interviews for possible employment, the company representatives may not bother to recruit at Uvic this time around.

VIOLENT PROTESTS

Dow Chemical has been the object of violent student protest on Canadian campuses this year because of alleged manufacture of the essential component polystyrene for export to napalm plants run by the parent corporation in the United States. At present the Dow company in America is the only major corporation actively involved in napalm production for military use in Vietnam.

Threats of active protest against the company's recruitment representatives have been voiced recently by the university's students.

NAPALM CONDEMNED

The executive council of the Alma Mater Society passed a motion two weeks ago condemning the use of napalm and directed the motion specifically at Dow Chemical of Canada.

Despite rumours that Dow company representatives may not show, spokesmen from the protesting bodies say they intend to continue planning demonstrations.

IF AND WHEN

Students from all facets of the campus population met Thursday to discuss possible directions demonstrations might take, when and if the Dow recruiter does arrive.

Methods suggested at the meeting ran from proposed sit-ins designed to obstruct entry where interviews take place, as was successfully done at UBC and McGill, to vigils and labor-type picket-lines.

In support of the planned protests students said they have printed 20 by 30-foot photographs of napalm victims which they intend to display prominently for chemistry students seeking interviews. Student organizers said they also expect aid from off-campus individuals and pacifist organizations. A meeting to decide final battle-strategy for demonstrations should Dow decide to recruit here is scheduled for Tuesday noon.

Funeral services for Vivian H. Pugh, 71, of 140 Douglas, will be held in Sioux City, Iowa. He died of a heart attack Tuesday in Grant's Pass, Ore., while enroute from his former hometown, Sioux City, to Victoria.

The former meatpacking and utilities businessman from Sioux City had become active in Victoria in financial and investment circles, mortgages and real estate undertakings.

Survivors are his wife, Ann; two sons, Dr. Phillip Pugh and Vernon Pugh of Sioux City, and a daughter, Vivian, of Omaha, Neb.

A long-time resident of Victoria, Mrs. Winifred Mary Rankin, died here Thursday at 83. Funeral services will be held in Sands Chapel at 1 p.m. Monday.

Mrs. Rankin was born in England and lived in Victoria for 39 years. She was a member of the Salvation Army for 60 years.

She is survived by her sons John and Thomas, Victoria, and David, with the RCAF in Edmonton; and daughters, Mrs. W. F. (Mary) Buchanan and Mrs. K. J. (Ruth) Thomas, of Victoria.

Belmont Avenue United Church will mark its 76th anniversary at the 11 a.m. service Sunday.

Following the service there will be a fellowship hour when new friends will meet and old acquaintances will be renewed. A special invitation is being tendered to old-timers to come and meet old friends.

With an Eye to the Future is the sermon title for the minister, Rev. Murray Henderson. Guest speaker at the 7 p.m. service will be Rev. Dr. Kenneth Prior, who will speak on the Vietnam issue. Dr. Prior was for many years a missionary in Nigeria and was western secretary for world missions of the United Church of Canada.

Dr. Prior and his wife, who was also a missionary, now are retired and live at 1310 Dallas. Following the service the Kaira will host a fireside hour in the church hall where an informal discussion and question period will be held.

Belmont Avenue Church began as a small Sunday School mission in the home of W. G. Luker, 1280 Pembroke Street, in the Spring Ridge area on June 23, 1891.

The present church was built four years later at a cost of $713.

First superintendent of the Sunday school was James Lory, a member of Pandora Street Methodist which is now Metropolitan United Church. He served until his death in 1904.

HAVE YOU HEARD OF BAHU'LLAH?

A hundred years ago, a Prisoner in a Turkish fortress in the Holy Land announced a new Revelation of God. His name was Baha'ullah. His "Letters to the Kings" are, without doubt, the most remarkable documents in religious history. Several million people have now responded to His call. Local clergy of all faiths have just received an offer of Baha'ullah's Message. We urge you to investigate it either through your clergyman, or by writing: Baha'is of Victoria, 2505 Empire Street, Victoria.

Fairfield Will Repeat Mod Hymns

In City Churches

Twentieth Century hymn tunes, previously a smashing success at Fairfield United Church, will again be featured this Sunday.

"This is our second experiment in worship," Rev. Dr. H. W. Kerley said Friday. "The first one proved highly successful."

"What I set out to prove was that worship does not need to be dull," he said. "It is we who make it so. If God enjoys our worship at all he must enjoy what is pleasing to us and what lifts up our spirits. God Himself is never dull."

The whole order of the morning service will be altered, Dr. Kerley said, because it will revolve about the theme Valiant for Truth.

Dr. Kerley's theme in the evening will be The Positive Gospel.

Sunday is Bible Sunday in Metropolitan United Church. A special display of Bibles from the Canadian Bible Society will be on display in the church.

Rev. Albert King will preach on The Living Word.

The evening service will take the form of Alberta and Yukon Territory Night, seventh in a series of the provinces. Guest speaker will be Rev. John Wood, minister of Brentwood and Shady Creek United Church.

At the 9:30 a.m. family service in Emmanuel Baptist Church Rev. Norman Archer will preach the ninth in a series of sermons on the gospel of John, entitled Light to the Blind.

The youth choir will sing and during the service, the children will be entertained by the puppet bear Winkle.

At the 11 a.m. service, Mr. Archer will discuss Truth and Falsehood. In the ninth of a series on the Ten Commandments.

In Central Baptist Church Rev. Gordon Melish will be guest speaker. He is Canadian representative for Baptist Missions of Canada. His topic will be As the Days of Noah Were—Noah Walked With God, at the 11 a.m. service. His sermon will be on Unquestioned Obedience at the 7 p.m. service. There will be a fireside hour after the evening service for the young people. A film will be shown—Berkeley, A New Kind of Revolution.

Ancient and Modern Necromancy, Alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced, is the lesson-sermon in First Church of Christ Scientist this Sunday. This verse from James is the golden text: "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you. Draw nigh to God and He will draw nigh to you."

A missionary on furlough from Nigeria will be guest speaker at the 11 a.m. service in Knox Presbyterian Church Sunday. She is Elsie Taylor, a graduate of Royal Jubilee Hospital.

In First United Church Rev. Marvin Fowler will preach at both services. His subject at 11 a.m. will be Holy Ground—The Place Where You Stand. At 7 p.m. he will speak on Religion and Morality.

A former chaplain at Royal Roads, Dr. C. H. MacLean of Ottawa, will be guest preacher in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at 11 a.m. Sunday. Rev. Bruce Molloy will administer the sacrament of baptism at the morning service. Mrs. Margaret Hurdon-Keller will be soloist. One Man's Journey is Mr. Molloy's subject at the 7:30 p.m. service.

In The Unitarian Church of Victoria Rev. Bert Watson of Sydney, Australia, will discuss the question Is Liberal Church a Contradiction in Terms? at 9:30 and 11 a.m. Sunday. Mr. Watson is a Unitarian minister and is at present holidaying in Canada.

Camp Columbia

Growth Rapid In 20 Years

The annual meeting of the Camp Columbia Association will be held in the Fireside room at St. John's Anglican Church Parish Hall, Quadra and Mason, at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

John Robertson, who has been camp chairman for the past three years, is retiring due to pressure of other responsibilities. Many of his friends and associates will be on hand to wish him luck.

"Our annual meeting is an important one because it gives everyone who is in any way interested an opportunity to hear what has been going on during the past year and to learn of and perhaps participate in next year's plans," said Mrs. Florence Batey of the camp committee Friday.

"The committee would like the parents of children who attend the camp to come and participate in the meeting," Mrs. Batey said.

The first camp, 20 years ago, accommodated 20 campers. Now each session can deal with 72 campers and up to 25 staff and families. There were 500 children who benefited from the camp last summer.

Two Nazarene Church pastors and their wives will attend the annual preachers' conference of the Canada Pacific district at Miracle Valley Ranch in Mission from Thursday to Saturday. All of the 18 Nazarene churches in the district will be represented.

Delegates from here are Rev. and Mrs. William Bahan of the Victoria church and Rev. and Mrs. Norman Falk of the Esquimalt church.

Chapman family in Victoria

Danger in Indonesia

Family Survives Horror

By DON GAIN

A missionary family who lived through the horrors of the Communist coup and the subsequent counter-coup in Indonesia will spend Christmas in their temporary home in Victoria.

Rev. Gordon Chapman and his family are on furlough until next June from the Immanuel Bible School in Sintang on the island of Kalimantan in West Borneo which is part of Indonesia. The Chapmans have been missionaries there since January, 1953.

On Friday Mrs. Chapman recalled the Communist coup of Oct. 1, 1965.

"The lives of all foreigners were in extreme danger," she said. "Graves were dug for all of us—common graves in a secluded spot about 10 kilometres from where we lived."

"They were preparing for what they called the suppression of all unco-operative elements."

Government officials who were unsympathetic to the Communists were first on the list, Mrs. Chapman said, then religious leaders and even the elders of the churches.

"President Sukarno was a tool of the Peking government," she explained.

Two generals, Nasution and Suharto, evaded capture, she said, and they staged a counter-coup and saved the country.

"There was widespread antagonism to Communism among the populace, she said, and this added weight to the counter-coup.

There was heavy loss of life, in the hundreds of thousands.

"The rivers were literally choked up with bodies and the heads of people who had any leanings toward Communism were pegged up on poles for a day."

COUP DANGER
But this did not compare with the bloodshed that would have occurred had the Communists won their coup, Mrs. Chapman said.

"The Communists had torture instruments hidden in every government office. They had plans to kill the women with hand grenades. The children, of course, they would save for indoctrination."

The economy of the country is poor.

EXCHANGE RATE
"When we went there in 1953 the exchange was 11 rupees for $1. In July of this year it was 160,000 to one."

Since the coup the opportunities for missionary work have been at their highest, Mrs. Chapman believes.

"People are questioning their standards and are seeking something solid, dependable, something to trust and really believe in."

The whole family is enjoying their furlough.

Martin Lauds Marchers

'All Canada Aware'

High-priced walker, right, draws jealous glance from lesser-sponsored master

Charity Brigade
May Hit 10,000

By MARK DICKINSON

Whether it was a mule or cabinet ministers they all were ready Friday night.

When the gun goes off at 8:30 this morning, an expected 10,000 marchers will start out on a 25.8-mile course, which the hardy will finish about eight hours later.

It is expected to be a perfect day for the spectacle. Skies will be clear, temperatures about 45 degrees and winds westerly at 20 miles an hour.

If feet don't tire too quickly, the mammoth Project 100 march will raise $100,000 or more.

Acting Prime Minister Paul Martin has sent along his best wishes for the marchers. A telegram received by the organizing committee Friday said:

"Best wishes for tomorrow's march. All Canada is aware of the significance of this event. Good Luck."—Paul Martin.

The list of high-priced talent has taken a colorful tone. Premier Bennett agreed Friday to sponsor a couple of cabinet ministers in today's Miles for Millions walk.

The premier will pay $1 for each mile walked by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell and Mines Minister Donald Brown.

He added a provision that in case either minister walked less than 10 miles in total he would pay nothing.

Mr. Brown's daughter, Lana, 15, will also be among the marchers.

Worth Something Less

But one marcher no longer believes a dog is a man's best friend and he has become pleasantly insulted over the matter.

Cadets at Royal Roads Military College have placed $3.44 on every mile walked by a black Labrador retriever called Champion Lady Matilda of Trotting Park (companion dog).

But they backed the dog's master Dr. Eric Graham, Royal Roads director of studies, for only $2 a mile. "So much for education," Dr. Graham remarked.

About 30 extra policemen have been called out to patrol the parade.

Three soup-and-crackers stations along the route will serve the hungry hordes and marchers are asked to bring their own cups.

Six army troop trucks will pick up drop-outs.

The walkathon will start at the Legislative buildings. The route passes close to every municipal hall in the Greater Victoria area.

Vans Tour Schools

Registration of marchers and sponsors continues right to the last moment — from 7:30 to 8:30 this morning at the legislative buildings.

No figures were available on the number of registrations up to 9 p.m. Friday at several downtown locations.

All day Friday, one of the six $15,000 mobile vans to be used in underdeveloped Commonwealth countries was on tour of most Greater Victoria schools.

The van, a student aid vehicle, will lead police and other public officials from the starting point this morning.

Marchers should take precautions to ensure they'll go the whole tour or end up in one of the rescue cars.

Here are some tips:

On the hike, take several short rests with the feet propped higher than the body. Alcohol massage is good, so is a fine foot powder.

Take it easy on the hike, especially in the first hour. After warming up quicken the pace, and then take easy walks intermittently.

Loosen shoe laces at mid-day stop and try a fresh pair of socks.

If you get blisters or other discomforts, stop and have someone call a rescue car that will be approximately within two miles of each walker.

Meanwhile, Dr. Lotta Hirschmanova of the Unitarian Services Committee, presently in Victoria, said she is optimistic about today's walkathon because "enthusiasm is a very thrilling and very good sign for Canada's future."

Price on His Head

On the money side of the picture, it became spectacular late Friday when Lawrie Wallace turned out to be a man with a golden step and a high price on his head.

The deputy provincial secretary has been sponsored to the tune of $34.55 a mile — a total of about $800 if he makes it all the way.

Assistant Commissioner G. R. Engel, head of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in B.C., will join the march. He said 55 members of his F Division staff are sponsoring him for $5 a mile.

"I don't guarantee to go very far, but we should be able to donate a few dollars to the cause," he added.

Saanich police are throwing their hats into the walkathon via one of their cadets, Paul Bragg, at $3.65 a mile.

As marchers struggle in at the end of the trek, the legislative buildings' cafeteria will provide refreshment. It will be staffed from 3 p.m. on by volunteers from the Centennial Committee office.

Legislature Man, 84
Expects to Go Mile

E. K. (Ned) DeBeck, the popular, white-thatched clerk of the British Columbia legislature, will be among the marchers today.

The pipe-smoking, 84-year-old parliamentarian said he expects to cover at least one mile.

"I've been practising for 20 years," Mr. DeBeck said Friday night, explaining that since he was appointed clerk he has probably walked 50 miles, in and out of the legislative chamber, behind Mr. Speaker.

He wasn't going to bed early—he expected he would retire about midnight and would still feel spry when the march starts at 8:30 a.m. today.

Mr. DeBeck's sponsor will be the Legislative press gallery, whose members will put up $1 for each mile he walks. He is an honorary life member of the gallery.

Shipworkers Hit Lean Time

Welfare Bingo for Christmas

By GEORGE INGLIS

Victoria's shipbuilding workers have been driven to bingo playing by unemployment conditions if they want to have an adequate Christmas, a union official said Friday.

Unemployment and the spectre of a lean Christmas has driven Local 191 of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, the shipyard's biggest union to stage a "welfare bingo for Christmas for unemployed members," business agent Neil Hindle said Friday.

Mr. Hindle was pessimistic about the conditions in the shipyards. About 200 of his union's workers are unemployed, and no apparent prospect of a bright Christmas season.

Asked to comment on a statement by Yarrows Ltd.

general manager John A. Wallace, that shipbuilding is good for a long time, Hindle said:

"We have skilled workers thinking seriously about going to San Diego or Alameda, where they have been offered work. I have papers right here on my desk explaining the methods of obtaining immigrant status in the U.S."

PRIORITY NEED

"When we have something to do here, we won't have the men. Surely Mr. Wallace, as a businessman, is aware of the law of diminishing returns."

"It is impossible to keep good men here on unemployment, especially with Christmas just around the corner."

Mr. Hindle said he feels the federal government has to put shipbuilding in a higher priority, "and an exporting nation such as Canada should be exporting in her own vessels."

'APATHETIC MP's'

The union official said he has been trying to gain some recognition from Ottawa for Victoria's problem, but "the local MP's are apathetic."

He said recent efforts on his part to obtain audience with the premier have met with no success.

A meeting of Vancouver and Victoria shipyard union officials has been scheduled for 10 a.m. Dec. 3 in the Boilermakers' Union Hall on Esquimalt Road, to discuss the entire West Coast shipbuilding picture, Mr. Hindle said.

RUMOR REPLY

Mr. Wallace's statements were in reply to rumors of further shipyard consolidation in this area.

With the Victoria Machinery Depot getting out of shipbuilding after 105 years and Yarrows being affiliated with the Burrard Dry Dock Co. Ltd. of North Vancouver, some union officials said the move constituted monopolistic control.

Mr. Wallace said, "We are going to make every effort to keep both yards busy. There is no thought of cutting back at one yard."

'Evelyn' Only Clue

Elderly Woman
Forgets Road

The name Evelyn is the lone clue held by city detectives in their search for the home of a 72-year-old woman found wandering by Oak Bay police at Willows Beach Nov. 14.

Miss Rubina Garden cannot remember the address of the apartment she is sharing with a woman named Evelyn Mac-something.

Miss Garden is being cared for at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

She came to Victoria from the United States to visit her sister. Then she moved into a suite at the Roccobella Apartments, 777 Blanshard.

"Apparently she moved out of there Nov. 13," a detective said Friday. "She can't remember where, other than she moved in with another woman named Evelyn Mac-something."

Victorians Like
To Line Up
At Start, Too

By NANCY BROWN

Victorians are apparently more eager to part with their hard-earned dollars than other B.C. residents according to the superintendent of motor vehicles, Ray Hadfield.

"This is the only place in the province where there is a crush of people trying to be first to get their car licence plates in January," he said Friday.

"They know they've got to get them, and that's it," he said, adding that many like to get the early-available four-digit plates.

'Special Plates'

As in recent years, the lowest number obtainable at the wicket in Victoria will be 3-001. Numbers 1 to 3,000 are "special numbers," generally going to the same people every year.

If a specific below-3000 number is not claimed before the end of February, then it is sent to a new applicant.

For 1968, plates revert to the 196-66 blue and white color combination, and will have blue numbers on a white background. There also will be a "19" flanking the "beautiful" at the top, with "68" on the other side.

No Increase

Mr. Hadfield said the cost of the plates will be the same as in previous years.

"This is one commodity which hasn't increased in price, although it's becoming more popular each year," he chuckled.

The plates, which are made at Oakalla Prison Farm, cost about 25 cents each to manufacture.

"It's quite a mark-up they have," said Mr. Hadfield.

The increase in the number of plates purchased in B.C. is significantly above the national average of a little under four per cent.

This year it is expected that 850,000 licences will be issued, five per cent more than last year.

So far this year, the Victoria office alone has issued 91,570 plates. The original quota of numbers from 3-001 to 70-000 was exhausted months ago.

Mail Orders

The office has handled about 20,000 mail orders, but these are not encouraged because of the cost to the department.

Special envelopes needed for mailing cost 17 cents each.

Mr. Hadfield said that at present provincial government policy is to continue annual issuing of plates.

"We have considered long-term licence plates but won't be doing that for some time," he said.

After the toast to the Queen comes a cheese tray and coffee, and drambule.

All About Eggs and Recipes, Too

Talking about food, had lunch yesterday with Dorothy Batcheller, home economics director of the Postgraduate Institute of Canada.

Even at this early date before the holiday season it seems as if I'll be forced to break my diet.

Wednesday, lunch with Flanahy gymnasts. Crab cocktail, caribou steak, potato puffs, green beans, green salad and peach melba — at the Empress.

Yesterday the little luncheon — no, a large luncheon for five, was also at the Empress.

I ask—how can one diet? First course — Scotch eggs. Only these were wrapped in sausage meat and rolled in cracker crumbs instead of oatmeal, and deep fried. Next crepes wrapped around chopped ham and topped with a rich cream sauce and buttered asparagus.

Desert was a cream topped chocolate affair and rich little cakes.

Dorothy Batcheller always has some interesting little tidbits to tell you about poultry and eggs.

According to this expert, eggs are about the most economical food to serve as a main course right now. A surplus has made eggs pretty low in price.

Maybe you know this but I didn't till yesterday so thought I would pass it along. The reason a soufflé, meringue or an omelet will fall is because it hasn't been cooked long enough. Even the slightest bit of moisture left in the egg makes it impossible for the poor thing to stay up.

When hard cooked eggs are wanted for sandwiches or salad why not poach hard, says the expert. This way there is no peeling of shell. And fresh eggs are the hardest to peel.

However, here is a neat trick for the hard boiled egg in the shell that comes off in chunks. It wouldn't look at all nice as a deviled egg, so just chop the egg, not too fine, moisten with mayonnaise, season and roll in grated cheese, paprika or chopped parsley. Either serve with tooth pick or fingers.

Dorothy says that eggs for decoration are now being cooked in well greased molds, from star shape to anything you like. Often they are artificially colored.

Here are a few of her suggestions for holiday entertaining: Egg slices topped with caviar; hard cooked egg white halves stuffed with mashed avocado, seasoned with salt, pepper and just a whisper of curry. Sieve egg yolks on top. Deviled eggs topped with anchovy. Bite size cream puffs with cheese right in the choux or plain and stuffed with cheese, paprika and onion salt, either baked or deep fried. Baked hollowed tomatoes filled with fluffy scrambled eggs.

A Year Away

The E. C. Ketchams are back in town and are now settled in at the Lady Simcoe Apartments.

When the Ketchams sold their beautiful Galiano property, Green Water, a year ago they sailed to the Orient and spent six months in Hong Kong. The last six months they have been living in San Francisco.

Ed Ketcham will be remembered as founding and publishing the Gulf Islander weekly for five years.

Mink for Mother

The Mink Stole — the status symbol that remains with us through the years — is a great come on as a money maker for charitable bazaar, etc.

The other day the lovely silver mink stole raffled at St. Joseph's Hospital Ladies Auxiliary bazaar certainly had everyone buying tickets.

Beachcombing Tonight

Out on the peninsula at Glen Meadows Golf and Country Club this evening people will be turning up in garb fit for beachcombing. The informal Beachcombers dance will be the opening of the winter social season. The dance is at the clubhouse, starting at 8:30.

A card game on Dec. 8 is next on the agenda to be followed by a turkey shoot on Dec. 16. A cocktail party will be held after the shoot.

At Wit's End

Housework Becomes Hilarious After Reading Erma's Book

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

It's really very hard to think of anything intrinsically funny about housework, especially when you're in the middle of it. But sit down after one of your more unsuccessful days, and read Erma Bombeck's book, At Wit's End, and suddenly the whole dreary business becomes hilarious.

It's hard to explain how the things that make you furious can be a source of humor. Perhaps it's the "misery loves company thing." At any rate Mrs.

Bombeck, like Jean Kerr, takes the neurosis-producing business of being a housewife and makes it all a huge joke.

Like most half-hearted housewives Mrs. Bombeck has occasional attacks of domesticity.

"Last November's seizure was a doozy. When I returned to my slovenly ways I discovered I had rearranged the furniture giving it all the personality of a bus station rest room. Ignoring the advice of experts I washed the draperies, causing the lining to sag like a toddler's underwear."

"I discovered I had gone to town and returned home with twenty yards of red corduroy for bedspreads. Heaven knows what I would have purchased if I owned a sewing machine."

Any one else own up to a cedar chest full of odds and ends like that corduroy? Mrs. Bombeck is also an old hand at the self improvement urge. As she puts it, these courses get a woman out of the house and give her a chance to contribute to the conversation at dinner:

"You'll never guess who almost fell into the ceramic kiln and nearly made an ashtray of herself!"

When it comes to travelling with children, Mrs. Bombeck is dead on. "Next to children on a trip, there is nothing more trying than their father."

Any paragraph that starts "I was going into my eleventh month of pregnancy (the doctor and I disagreed on this point) . . ." is sure of a sympathetic reading.

There's much more, about what happens the minute Mama gets on the telephone when the children are around, about dieting, and about the woman hours lost hunting for things, and its all good tonic after an exasperating day.

For you get the impression these things could be funny even in your house if only you had the wit to see it that way. (NB: remember to re-read Mrs. Bombeck during the annual Christmas panic.)

Anyway, at least one husband has been heard laughing out loud, too, at Mrs. Bombeck's version of the housewife's dilemma.

Mrs. C. R. Fast, Christmas gifts. Mrs. H. L. McKenzie was in charge of the Christmas hamper raffle. Mrs. P. Pederson, the Christmas cake raffle and Mrs. A. Holmes, the petit point picture raffle. Mrs. C. N. McMeekin was in charge of the gift dip.

Tea conveners were Mrs. J. Knight and Mrs. H. Todd. Tea hostess was Mrs. G. S. McMorran. Mrs. Fred Homer arranged table decorations and Mrs. F. Mallett was in charge of the tea urns. Also helping with the tea were Mrs. H. Stewart, Mrs. R. Empey, Mrs. J. Homer, Mrs. W. G. Walton, Mrs. E. Symons, Mrs. E. Bowden, Mrs. R. McDermatt, Mrs. R. F. Gray, and Mrs. W. George.

The proceeds of $600 will go toward finishing the kitchen in the new Goodwill building.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from the girl who described her boyfriend as a "first-class gentleman" because he offered to pay for her abortion (which she later discovered she didn't need) moved me to write my first letter to a newspaper.

This letter will probably sound like a grade B movie or a rotten make-up story, and I only wish it were. But unfortunately it's true — every word of it.

My mother died when I was 16 and I started sleeping with an older fellow. I told myself I was doing it because I missed my mother. I know now I did it because I was too dumb and too weak to say no.

When I became pregnant my boyfriend took me to an abortionist who botched the job and I almost died. As a result of that abortion I will never be able to have children. My "great love" dropped me promptly and I took up with another bum who dragged me down into the gutter where I stayed for three miserable years.

One day I woke up sick to death of myself and decided to get a respectable job. I am now 29 years old, and I look 45. I avoid my school friends because I have made such a mess of my life I don't know what to say when we meet.

I am tortured by the past and terrified of the future. I wrecked my life because of a foolish mistake. If just one girl learns something from this letter perhaps my messed-up life will have served some purpose. Please print it. — MY NAME IS MUD

Dear Friend: You did not ask for advice but I feel obliged to give it. Your inability to forgive yourself has set you up on a course of self-destruction. Brooding and agonizing over past mistakes takes energy — energy that could be used to build a decent future. Professional help might be the answer if you are unable to do it alone.

Dear Ann Landers: Last week I had dinner at the home of a friend. I have eaten there before and he is a member of his family always said grace. This time his mother asked me to say it. I declined, explaining I was under the impression that grace should be said by a member of the host family.

The woman called me ill-mannered and ignorant (those words) and shouted angrily, "If you don't say grace we won't eat." I was too choked up to speak so I sat there. They did eat after a few minutes and grace was not said. I didn't touch a bite of food and excused myself immediately after dinner.

My boyfriend walked me home and he was terribly upset. Was I wrong? Should I apologize? If I am invited to his home for dinner again, should I accept? — PERPLEXED

Dear Perplexed: Guests are

One of the most expensive of bridge errors is the use of Blackwood on the wrong type hand. South's operation on this deal provided a classic example.

After North had shown the values for a response at the two-level, plus spade support, South wisely took off into a Blackwood sequence. Finding only one ace, he stopped at five spades. But it was too late.

Diamonds were led and after declarer had ruffed the third round, he needed the rest of the tricks. He decided that since one discard on dummy's club king would be useless, he would ultimately have to hitch his wagon to the heart finesse. First he rattled off a number of trumps, but no one was squ

"Your club king was useless," South complained, "and I was forced to discard the king of hearts, thus doing insult to injury."

For a start, declarer would have been better off to lead four spades instead of three. This would have shown the full strength and character of his hand, leading North free to pass or go as his hand suggested. Had he led three spades, South's drive into four no trump would have been a particularly futile, for even if North had two aces, South would have been safe. Had South's hand been strong enough for a slam effort, five hearts would have been a better move.

Finally, South should have made eleven tricks. By ruffing the third diamond, he cashes the club ace and the king, throwing a heart, ruffs a club, plays trump ace and trump to the queen. With both black suits breaking so gloriously, the heart finesse is not needed, but can be taken at this point if the club does not break.

He decided that since one discard on a dummy's club would be useless, he would ultimately have to hitch his wagon to the heart finesse. First he ruffed off a number of trumps, but no one was squaring. Later, when the heart finesse failed, so did the trick.

"Your club king was useless," South complained, finding himself in a bad position.

For a start, declarer would have been better advised to rebid four spades instead of three. This would lead South the full strength and character of his hand, lead North free to pass or go on as his hand suggested. Had there been three spades, South's dive into four no trump particularly futile, for even if North had two aces, slam might not be safe. Had South's hand been strong enough for a slam effort, five hearts would have been a better move.

Finally, South should have made eleven tricks. He ruffed the third diamond, he cashes the club ace, throwing a heart, ruffs a club, plays trump ace, trump to the queen. With both black suits breaking favorably, the heart finesse is not needed, but can be taken at this point if the clubs do not break.

Garden Notes

Rose Guide for Dime

By M. V. CHESNUT

In these days of galloping inflation, you don't expect ten cents to buy very much of anything, and particularly in the field of garden books, any authoritative reference will almost always knock a big hole in a $10 bill.

You can imagine my gratification, then, when a little book arrived in the mail the other day describing and rating all the commonly grown roses of the world, and at a cost of one thin U.S. dime.

The booklet is called "A Guide for Buying Roses" and it is available from the American Rose Society, 4048 Ruseloa Place, Columbus, Ohio, 43214.

In it, roses are grouped in their respective classes — hybrid teas, floribundas, grandifloras, climbers, polyanthas, shrub, miniatures — and are listed alphabetically.

Each listing gives the approximate height of the rose, its color, and its rating, and this rating business needs a bit of explaining.

Each rose is grown for at least two years in 24 test gardens scattered throughout the different climatic zones of United States and Canada.

During this test period, expert growers keep each plant under constant observation, scoring it and awarding "marks" according to a pre-arranged scoring system.

Points are awarded for vigor, clarity of coloring, hardiness, disease resistance, grace of bud and flower form, strength of stem and neck, fragrance, beauty of foliage and other characteristics.

If ever a perfect rose should be developed, its rating would be 10, so in the rating scored by each rose, it is possible to estimate how it stacks up against theoretical perfection.

The highest marks in the list are awarded to the hybrid tea rose Peace, with a rating of 9.6, only .4 points away from perfection.

The lowest rating is also to a hybrid tea, one called Mia Maid, with a score of only 2.0.

Strangely enough, the second highest rating goes to a hybrid perpetual — a class not very often grown nowadays — called Oskar Cordel, scoring 9.2 points.

In the floribunda class, honors are shared by Betty Prior and Fashion with 9.0 points each. Among the grandifloras, Queen Elizabeth and Carrousel top their class with 9.0 points.

In the climbers, Colonial White has a 9.0 rating with the dark red Chevy Chase hard on her heels with an 8.9 score. The winner in this class is Paul's Scarlet Climber, 9.1.

In the shrub roses, the leader is Oskar Cordel with 9.2. Bunched for second place are Jeanette, Ohio and Yellow Altai, all with 9.0 points.

This class is a sort of catchall for the various species roses and their hybrids.

Polyanthus roses are what might be called dwarf floribundas. In this class the pale pink The Fairy takes the honors with 8.6 points, while the well-known Dutch rose Orange Triumph has a rating of 8.1.

In the true miniatures, the kind usually grown as houseplants, leader in its class is the white-flowered Cinderella with a rating of 9.0, while Red Imp is close behind with 8.9 points.

Machines Hold Him Captive

By JOHN SENOR

I am in these book-of-the-month clubs. I don't even remember when I joined them. All I know is, once you get in one it is impossible to get out.

Trying to resign from a book club is like trying to talk your sergeant major out of a discharge during war time. Except book clubs are not run by sergeants. They are run by a battery of curious machines.

The machine sends you books. The machine stamps out your bills. The machine chews you out when you are late with a payment. Only there is more than one machine involved. And I don't think these machines know what the other machines are doing.

The machine that sends out selection cards instructs me: "Please mark in the box at the left the books you do NOT want sent."

This is a tricky machine. It knows people are late by nature with any kind of correspondence.

It gives you something like 15 minutes from the time the card arrived to mark the box and get it in the mail. Otherwise, the books you do NOT mark are on their way.

This machine sells books like mad.

I can never remember to return the marked card on time. Well, this delights that selling machine. From time to time, I have written it. But the machine doesn't pay any attention at all. It just turns my correspondence over to the complaint machine.

"Gentlemen," I wrote (not knowing the machine's proper name). "I do not want any more books. Do not sent me any more cards that I have to mark telling you which books I do NOT want. I do NOT want ANY books. And I do not feel I have to tell you a book at a time which ones I do not want. Sincerely,"

I did not hear from the complaint machine. But the selling machine sent me another card. And the billing machine sent me another bill. And the packaging machine packaged up another bundle of books that I had failed to tell them I did not want.

I considered writing the machine and telling it I was dead. Surely they would not keep sending books to a dead man. But the illogic of the machine frightened me out of this plan.

(I could visualize them saying: "No use sending this guy any more cards to mark. Dead men can't mark the books they don't want. Just send him ALL the books.")

I tried not paying the bills. Well, they turned this matter over to the nasty machine.

I started getting these nasty cards with IBM testmarks all over them, with curt remarks such as: "Courtesy Is Our Aim, But Collection Is Our Goal. Please Remit Immediately, etc., etc."

I ignored this and the nasty machine, in another week or so, started getting violent.

It began making subtle remarks using the word "attachment."

Well, I paid up. The shadow of debtor's prison scared me. I really don't have enough personal property worth attaching.

The most valuable thing I have, I guess, is this fantastic collection of brand new books. I got some more yesterday.

The Dancing World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

Astaire Still Steppin' Out

NEW YORK (NANA) — Fred Astaire is titling his next TV special, A Song and Dance-in, starring the best dancer of our day... He still looks lean and great on the sunny side of 70, as you'll see in his film, Finian's Rainbow.

Joanna Pettit flew to Europe to see Terence Stamp who is making up for lost time in hibernation on the career front. Next for Terry, Fellini's Don't Bet Your Head with the Devil. The most frightening devil of all is in Richard Burton's Doctor Faustus.

Though Barry Sullivan has been dating blonde actress Irene Kelly for more than a year, he says he is not rushing into marriage again. He's wise. Barry has been riddled too many times on the matrimonial range.

Joan Crawford has written the foreword to the Price-Stern-Sloan book about the late king, Clark Gable. The tome is by two Gable fans, Gabe Essoe, a Disney publicity lad, and writer Ray Lee. It will all be there including the Saturday Review's smashing piece on Clark in The Misfits, the movie that killed him.

Wives get bored in Hollywood with the pool and the servants, which is why Mrs. David Nelson, June Blair, would like to make an acting comeback... All rehearsing was stopped when Katherine Hepburn cut her finger during a scene for The Lion in Winter, and was rushed to the hospital.

Claire Bloom says she's sick, sick, sick of playing Shakespeare. From now on, especially on television, she'll have nothing further to do with the bard.

When Nancy Sinatra Junior takes off on her five-city tour to promote her TV special, Movin' with Nancy, she will be accompanied by her photographer boyfriend, Ron Joy. Their chums say it's serious. Nothing is serious in Hollywood until they walk back from the altar... Which reminds me, whatever happened to the marriage plans of Natalie Wood and Richard Gregson? You see them together all the time but they were supposed to wed in August.

Bea Lillie couldn't stand the rain and drizzle in London and came back for a fast breeze in New York, but she must return there for her one-woman show. Bea's agent, Mrs. Carlton Cole, tells me that Bea is halfway through her autobiography and that it's great. Bea's advance from Doubleday was $100,000, but she has been dillydallying. For that kind of advance, one rushes.

Dancer-director Rudolph Nureyev's gone capitalistic in a big way. Just bought a luxury home near London, as a companion piece for his villa on the Riviera.

The 'Shamateurs'

SYDNEY HARRIS

The world's title in hypocrisy has long been held — rightly or wrongly — by the British. For centuries, other European nations have considered them sanctimonious knaves.

But the Americans are moving right up there into first place. Last month, the British Lawn Tennis Association recommended that professionals as well as amateurs be allowed to play in all British tennis tournaments, including Wimbledon.

This is the first time a tennis body of national stature has tried to rip off the veil of "shamateurism" in world tennis. Unlike golf or many other sports, tennis is rigidly divided into "professional" and "amateur" classes, which may not compete with one another.

But everybody knows that "amateur" tennis is a bald lie. The so-called amateurs often do better than the pros: Their expenses and under-the-table money can amount to more than the pros make honestly, and such expense "reimbursements" aren't even taxable.

ing "open" tournaments, and in sustaining the hypocritical fiction of "amateurism" in tennis.

Their open mouths preach "purity," and their closed eyes overlook the heavy subsidization of the amateur field.

As Herman Davis, chairman of the All-England Club, bluntly put it in announcing an "open" Wimbledon for 1968: "Everyone knows that amateurs are earning their livings from the game and, frankly, earning them dishonestly. The only straight people left in lawn tennis are the professionals, who earn their money honestly and openly."

Of all the games, tennis purports to be the most chivalrous, honorable and courteous; and if any game is designed to build character in young people, it is tennis. Yet cynicism gets in at an early age, when the aspiring young player sees that his "amateur" standing is under-pinned by lush living, rich perquisites, and undercover payments.

The men who have long controlled the game in America are a pompous and pretentious lot, who like to think of tennis as a closed corporation operating for the pride and pleasure of "our sort."

But "our sort" has ill-treated the game, and hindered its popularity far more than helping it. The false country-club aura with which they have surrounded the game makes it anathema to millions of potential players.

Golf was once a "class" game, but it did not flourish and capture the imagination of the people until it was democratized. In my view, it is not one-tenth as exciting or challenging as tennis, but has a hundred times more players and spectators — and supporters.

Christmas Overtime Approved

The board of industrial relations Friday ruled that employees in stores may work a limited amount of overtime during the Christmas shopping season.

In the two weeks prior to Dec. 23, the board said, employees may work two hours of overtime on any two days.

A verdict of accidental death was brought in by a coroner's jury Friday night in the traffic fatality involving Miss Winifred Tucker, who died from a fractured skull and sub dural hemorrhage.

The jury attached no blame to the driver of the car, Mrs. Sheila Hartnall, or to Miss Tucker, who died from a fractured skull and sub dural hemorrhage.

The United Red Feather-Cross Appeal is within a few thousand dollars of its $600,000 goal.

Chairman Gil Auchincloss told a meeting of the Community Chest board of directors Friday that cash contributions, pledges and commitments now total $585,500.

Cuts, sprains, bruises, stings and even fractures—they sent 262 outdoors-loving people to St. Joseph's Hospital last summer. The total formed a June-August record of beach and park injuries that were brought to the emergency ward.

Chief Surgeon Rejects Claim:

No Spine Cure Took Place

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. William R. Drucker, surgeon-in-chief at Toronto General Hospital, said Friday night that paralyzed driver paralyzed in a car accident four years ago, was shown to a panel of doctors here Nov. 14 by Dr. Gordon Murray, 73-year-old Toronto surgeon. Murray told the doctors of a new spinal operation that per-

Labor Minister, Secretary Clash Over Dock Strike

OTTAWA (CP)—Labor Minister Nicholson and his parliamentary secretary, Bryce Mackasey, clashed openly in the Commons Friday over the best approach to solving a labor dispute that has closed down the Port of Montreal.

Mackasey, MP for the Montreal riding of Verdun, said the author of a binding order that has led to the shutdown has a moral obligation to come back and explain its "ambiguities" to labor and management.

"But the unions won't accept it," objected Mr. Nicholson from his front-bench seat as a 3½-hour emergency debate on the dock tie-up neared an end.

NO LEGAL WAY
The minister maintained earlier there is no legal way short of special legislation in which his department can intervene in the dispute.

HL outspoken parliamentary secretary said Laurent Picard, author of the report whose binding recommendations set off the port dispute, should "come back from his holiday and clarify the ambiguities."

If the unions wouldn't accept the clarification, they would then be violating the spirit of their contract, Mackasey said.

"He has an obligation to come back and clarify these minor points," the Montreal MP added.

NO 'DEBATE'
Nicholson interjected several times and Mackasey said at one point:

"I'm not getting into a debate with my own minister. I'm just saying we can't afford a shutdown of the port of Montreal."

A few minutes later during the question period, Theogene Ricard (PC-St. Hyacinthe-Bagot) asked whether Nicholson will consider the Mackasey suggestion.

"I always give very careful consideration to suggestions from my parliamentary secretary," the minister replied.

mits paraplegic patients to walk. Then he had his patient, the 24-year-old truck-driver, slide to his feet off a hospital bed and stand erect.

Murray, senior surgeon at Toronto General, said he had performed an operation on the spinal cord—hitherto considered impossible—that had cured a hopeless cripple.

'EXTREME CONCERN'
Drucker said in an interview Friday night:

"On review of the operative record and x-rays, it is evident that no operation was performed on Bernard Proulx to shorten the cervical (neck) spine nor was the spinal cord transected and rejoined."

Drucker expressed "extreme concern about the disastrous effect premature release of this matter has had in raising false hopes among paraplegics around the world."

NO COMMENT
Murray, described by his contemporaries as a brilliant surgeon and innovator, was in Ottawa Friday night to be invested as a companion in the Order of Canada for his past surgical accomplishments.

The Globe and Mail, which interviewed Murray by telephone, says he was calm and uncommunicative. He refused to talk about the matter on the telephone and would not see a reporter in person.

"I'm not discussing it," he said.

Murray was expected to be back in Toronto today.

Dr. Drucker said doctors of the University of Toronto, where he is professor of surgery, and of the hospital are continuing to review the situation.

'Near Panic' Buying

Gold Rush Now Stampede

LONDON (AP) — The record rush to buy gold reached stampede levels in the bullion markets of western Europe Friday, reflecting widespread anxiety over monetary values in the wake of the 14.3-per-cent devaluation of the British pound.

Dollar Not In Peril

WASHINGTON (CP) — Firm confidence in the ability of the U.S. dollar to ride out the storm of European gold speculation was declared Friday by the managing director of the 107-nation International Monetary Fund.

Pierre-Paul Schweitzer, in an interview recorded for broadcast by the Voice of America, described as a temporary flurry the rush to exchange dollars for gold in the wake of devaluation of the British pound.

He said it will be overcome by the determination of the financial powers to support the pound and maintain their own currency values.

FULL CONFIDENCE

Earlier, administration officials avowed full confidence that American and world gold resources are ample to protect the dollar from following the pound into devaluation.

Presidential press secretary George Christian told reporters in San Antonio, Tex., that he wanted to underscore assurance that President Johnson would "reaffirm unequivocally" U.S. determination to maintain its guaranteed price of $35 an ounce to anyone wanting to buy gold.

In London, gold dealers said buying orders were arriving in "near panic" proportions from all over the world.

Paris reported sales 10 times above normal. (See also Page 5.)

In Johannesburg, stock exchange dealers jostled each other in their efforts to buy gold mining stocks. The scene was described as "near pandemonium." South Africa, as one of the leading producers of gold, would profit heavily if its price rose.

PAPER FOR METAL

The Swiss National Bank advised leading banks to halt temporarily forward sales of gold, for delivery in 30, 60 or 90 days, in a move to protect its supply of U.S. dollars.

The drive for gold was a broad movement to change of European gold speculation was declared Friday by the managing director of the 107-nation International Monetary Fund.

Behind the move appeared to be general uneasiness about the strength of the dollar and speculation that the price of gold may be revalued upward from the $35 an ounce the U.S. government pays.

PRICE STEADIER

In London the international gold pool steadied the metal's price by continuing to supply the bullion market with the gold needed to satisfy all demand.

The pool was set up in 1962 by eight nations for this purpose. The United States supplies more than 50 per cent of the pool's needs.

France suspended its role in the pool in June and the U.S. took over its nine per cent share that France held. The other

Cyprus Asks UN Protection

'BRINK OF WAR'—THANT

From UPI, AP, CP

High winds and low clouds obscured Turkish intentions as dawn broke over the eastern Mediterranean island of Cyprus this morning.

Only mounting waves kept Turkish invasion forces from smashing into this Greek-dominated country. At least that was the general opinion in Nicosia, Athens and in New York where the United Nations Security Council wrangled far into the night on the generations-long problem.

The Cypriots requested the emergency meeting of the Council to stop the Turks from invading. Ambassador to the UN Zenon Rossides declared "it is the knowledge of all governments that this weekend has been fixed for the unlawful invasion."

Shortly after the Council met, Secretary-General U Thant warned that:

"The portents regarding Cyprus are increasingly ominous. Indications at the moment are that Greece and Turkey are at the brink of war over Cyprus."

After two hours of heated debate, the 15-nation council called a recess so members could consult privately on what action to take.

Diplomats worked in Athens, Ankara and Nicosia to head off a war between NATO partners Greece and Turkey that was certain to follow if the Turks followed up their threats to beat up their forces on Cyprus.

FOCAL POINT

The dramatic call-out of the Security Council was the focal point of negotiations, however. Thant appealed for the gradual withdrawal of all foreign troops from the island, where Greece and Turkey maintain garrisons. However, he insisted that the 4,400-man UN peacekeeping force, including 900 Canadians, remain in control.

Thant referred to Greek, Turkish and British garrisons left on the island when it became independent from Britain in 1960. Under the independence agreement, Greece was allowed to station 850 men on the island, Turkey 750. But since then, the Greeks have sent an entire division of 7,000 regulars. In addition, they have command of the more than 10,000 members of the Cypriot national guard.

PRICE OF PEACE

Turkey has demanded the withdrawal of the Greek regulars and the dismantling of the national guard as its price for staying the invasion. It also demanded the removal of the commander of these forces, Gen. George Grivas, who was recalled to Athens Sunday.

Rossides told the Security Council Friday night that "my country is under an imminent threat of attack and invasion by a big and powerful neighbor, Turkey, with whom we wish to live in peace."

Turkey's Ambassador Orhan Eralp quickly replied with a charge that Greece has been taking steps aimed at the annexation of Cyprus. This, he said, was the background of the recent attack on the Turkish minority.

"The attack on the Turkish Cypriot villages (last week) has been brutal beyond description," Eralp declared.

Turks Promise Final Solution

ANKARA (Reuters) — Turkish President Cevdet Sunay today sent messages to world heads of state announcing that Turkey has "decided to solve the Cyprus problem once and for all."

As the messages went out, two-thirds of the Turkish Navy was gathered in the Mediterranean between the southern Turkish ports of Mersin and Iskenderun, which lie to the north and northeast of the eastern tip of Cyprus.

Pay-Delay $250,000 Holds Bennett Interest

By IAN STREET
Legislative Reporter

When Premier Bennett talks about interest on the late flood control payments from the U.S. under the Columbia Treaty he is discussing a cool quarter million dollars.

At the 6 1/2 per cent interest demanded by the premier, the amount still owing is $244,299.99.

DEMANDING 6 1/2 PER CENT

This covers the period July 31, when the Duncan dam on the Columbia went into operation, and Nov. 23 when the principal sum of $11,929,031.25 was finally paid. The hold-up was due to failure of Congress 24.

to approve the payment by the U.S.

Now there is a possibility that B.C. may demand 6 1/2 per cent

A government spokesman said Friday: "If you accept the claim that interest is owing on the main payment for the period payment was not made, but due, then you automatically must accept the claim for interest on the interest, for the period during which it goes unpaid."

PUSHED WITH VIGOR

External Affairs Minister Paul Martin, acting for B.C. in further negotiations under the international treaty, wired Mr. Bennett Thursday saying the question of interest settlement with the U.S. was being "pushed with vigor" by Ottawa.

Gaullists

Quebec Called Colony

LILLE, France (Reuters) — A document outlining relations between French and English-speaking Canadians was distributed to 4,000 delegates attending a Gaullist party congress which opened here Friday.

The document was said to form the background to what President Charles de Gaulle was expected to say on Canada during a press conference Monday.

The document listed the following points:

● Six million French-Canadians "are living under a semi-colonial regime."

● "By providing that Quebec shall be a bilingual province, the constitution of 1867 ensures a guarantee for the minority while English remains the only official language in the other nine provinces."

● "The nature of the external trade of Quebec is characteristic of a colonized economy, mainly producing and exporting raw materials while importing manufactured goods."

● "Quebec includes 40 per cent of the unemployed of Canada."

More Than a Minimum Christmas

Five and a half years ago a family of six left eastern Europe for a bright new future in Canada.

Industrious, careful and thrifty, they arrived in Victoria — father, mother, a six-month-old baby, and three other children, between 7 and 13 years old.

They worked hard in the community, and started buying their own house.

As with many old-country

families they didn't believe in credit buying, and soon owned their own furniture. A year ago they bought a used car.

Four months ago, the 35-year-old mother became pregnant, and the girls, now aged 13 and 9 were eagerly looking forward to the birth of a Canadian into the family.

Suddenly, two months ago, everything changed.

The father, a heavy machine operator, suffered a severe mental breakdown and was committed to a mental institution for an indefinite period.

The family was thrown back onto its own resources, without relatives or friends able to assist them.

It was a sad moment for the mother, anxious and uncertain about her husband, as she sat in a Victoria city social workers' office and asked for help to keep the young family together.

The high hopes of that spring in 1962 were dashed, and she was dependent upon the government to help her out of her predicament.

Fortunately, because of past thrift, the family has no debts, and their social assistance income of $200 a month will meet their minimum requirements.

But the term "minimum" does not include a happy Christmas, although some extras can be provided through additional social assistance.

It is up to Victorians to show these new Canadians that they are welcome in the land in which they have chosen to raise their children.

Through contributions to the Colonist 500 Fund they can spread some of the joys of Christmas, and soften the blow fate has dealt the hard-working family.

By Friday the pace of donations to the fund was gaining momentum, with that steady giver "Anonymous" appearing frequently at the counter.

'Union Leaders Planned Alberni Walkout' Forest Firm Claims

PORT ALBERNI—MacMillan Bloedel labor relations officer Gordon Towill Friday accused Walter Allen, president of Local 1-85 of the IWA, of personal responsibility for a complete walkout at Sproat Lake, Franklin and Cameron divisions of the company.

More than 1,000 fallers and other woods operation employees of the company failed to show up for work Friday morning.

Almost all put in an appearance at a mass meeting at the Alberni Athletic Hall instead.

No Comment

Mr. Towill's letter said Mr. Allen, fellow union officers and certain members of the union, were personally responsible for issuing orders to employees of the three logging divisions not to report for work Friday morning, but to attend the meeting.

Union officials refused to comment on the situation after the gathering, at which the employees agreed to remain off work for as long as necessary to settle their grievance.

Only three voted to go to work.

The walkout began last Thursday when fallers at Sproat Lake charged that two men on the regular MB crews had been laid off in late September, and had not been put back to work, although contractors on the job were hiring junior men.

Mr. Towill's letter to Mr. Allen claimed the union leader knew that no company fallers are at present laid off.

The two fallers about whom the dispute originated at Sproat Lake division, now appear to be employed elsewhere on the company operations.

Nevertheless, the fallers claim that a company policy is developing which could lessen their job security. If contractors can continue to hire while company employees can be laid off.

Choice $100

The average wage of $80 a day claimed for fallers in the company's letter to Mr. Allen was termed "a bit high" by some woodsmen.

"About $60 might be closer, I would imagine," one worker estimated. However only the company would be able to give an exact average, since the firm has the complete payroll to work from.

Fallers wages vary because they are paid on a board-foot basis.

Rates could range from $50 to as high as $100 a day for fallers in choice wooded sections.

Damages?

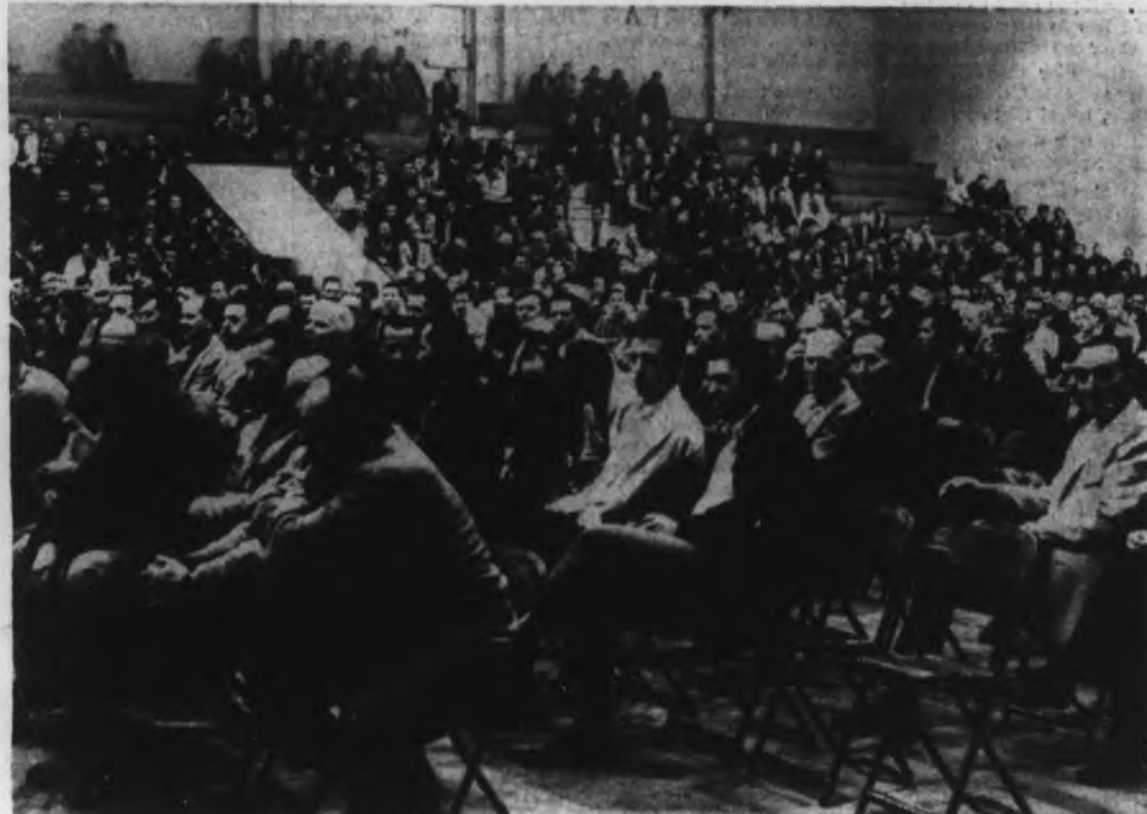

The company letter warned Mr. Allen and union members that MacMillan Bloedel had initiated action through the Department of Labor, and that damages may be claimed.

Since the agreement was signed in 1966 there have been 10 illegal walk-outs by the IWA, Mr. Towill stated. Seven of them, he claimed, were in Mr. Allen's area.

"We expect you to act in a responsible manner and advise your men to return to work immediately," the letter said, adding that a copy of the letter to Mr. Allen had also been forwarded to Leslie Peterson, Minister of Labor.

Union officials remained tight-lipped on who called Friday's meetings and arranged for information pickets to be on the job at all three woods operations.

The fallers set up their own committees and arranged the meeting.

NANAIMO — Some words have the power to stop a man in his tracks.

The words that stopped Thomas Miskiman, 23, Friday, came when a confused jury foreman said "There seems to be some mistake."

Moments before the same foreman had told the court the jury found Miskiman not guilty of criminal negligence.

The jury had deliberated for 30 minutes before bringing in the innocent verdict.

Mr. Justice J. F. Gregory ordered Miskiman released. With a sigh of relief, his ordeal over, the young man stepped from the prisoner's box, and prepared to leave the courtroom.

But all was not well. There was frantic movement in the jury box, as the 12 citizens looked at each other in amazement.

Foreman William Little rose and told the judge the jury had found the accused guilty of dangerous driving, and was just waiting to be asked.

Mr. Justice Gregory ordered Miskiman to step back across the line that separates freedom from custody, and then asked the jury members what they had to say about dangerous driving.

"Guilty," said the jury.

Mr. Justice Gregory immediately discharged the jurors.

Then he looked down at defence counsel Rodney Taylor, and prosecutor David Williams, and said, "Do we have a verdict or not?"

After some deliberation and discussion with the lawyers, Mr. Justice Gregory said, "I'll accept it as a verdict, it's the right one, according to the evidence."

Miskiman, who was so close to being free, will be sentenced this morning at 11 a.m.

Home Sweet Hall

By KLAUS MUENTER

NORTH COWICHAN — The municipality's nerve centre, where a record 1968 budget of just under $3,000,000 will be administered, will be officially opened 3 p.m. today by Robert Strachan, MLA.

Only a few weeks ago the municipal staff moved to the new premises from the old municipal hall at Duncan, where a municipal headquarters had been established when the railroad became the main mode of transportation more than half a century ago.

The first municipal hall in 1873 when North Cowichan became a municipality, was located at Maple Bay, which then was key transportation point when people reached the Cowichan Valley by steamer.

That year 75 voters in the municipality signed a petition for an incorporation charter, and today the population has reached 11,000 people, of whom 4,900 are eligible voters.

The new $275,600 municipal hall, designed by Hammond and Farmer and built by Victoria firm G. H. Wheaton, is the administration centre for 47,544 acres of land including 12,000 acres of B.C.'s only municipal forest reserve and 100 miles of road.

Fifteen years ago the municipality's budget was only three quarters of a million dollars and taxable assessment during the same period jumped from $7,000,000 to $24,000,000, largely because of the increase of big industry.

Teacher's Dismissal Tested by Board

A board of reference was set up Friday to hear the appeal of K. L. C. Hasanen, a teacher at Cowichan High School, against dismissal.

Mr. Hasanen was dismissed from his teaching post by the local school board after he refused to allow principal Harold Proctor and district superintendent A. D. Jones into his classroom.

Education Minister Peterson said an investigating committee of teachers and trustees upheld the dismissal.

Mr. Peterson said the board of reference will be composed of nominees from the B.C. Teachers' Association, B.C. School Trustees Association and the chief justice of B.C.

Mr. Hasanen's teaching methods have been described as "years ahead" of most other teachers but he has refused to comment on the dismissal until his appeal is heard.

Major Hospital Overhaul Can Be Bought Cheaply

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI — The Alberni Valley can vote to buy itself a superbargain if a hospital referendum is passed, said Hospital Board Chairman Charles Blair.

"What this hospital referendum means is that the community will be getting a $3,500,000 hospital for about a million and a half."

Civic Day

Approval came just in time for the necessary advertisements to appear in the newspapers, so the referendum can be held Dec. 9, the same day as the civic and school board elections.

Total amount of the money bylaw is $3,406,809 with $75,000 of this allocated for improvements at the Torino Hospital.

"This must be voted on over the whole Alberni-Clayquot Region," Mr. Blair explained. It must have a 60 per cent majority to pass if the work is to go ahead.

20 Years

"We must show the whole amount on the ballot, but I would like to stress that the taxpayers share of this will be 40 per cent spread over a 20-year period," he said.

"The regional hospital district borrows the entire sum from the provincial hospital financing authority, a government agency set up especially for hospital construction."

"But 60 per cent of the government share, does not have to be repaid," Mr. Blair explained.

"This means the community's contribution is only between 1.5 and 1.6 million of the whole cost."

Phone Campaign

Because of the short amount of time left and the importance of a good turnout at the polls is to become a reality, the women's auxiliary will undertake a phoning campaign to remind citizens to vote on the issue.

Mrs. Les Hughes, auxiliary representative on the hospital board, said she hoped to enlist the aid of the Alberni Hospital Club and the Junior Auxiliary members to handle the massive job.

"We do not plan to suggest how people should vote, but only to remind them that it is urgent that they do so," she said.

On Display

The board tabled discussion of the possible purchase of the former Smith Memorial School sisters' residence for a nurses' residence for the time being.

A hospital advisory committee is now being set up by the regional hospital district as required under government ruling, and will be referred to this body later.

Administrator F. J. Whittington said in response to requests been planned to cover them. But exposed aluminum ducts are not unsightly, with 20 washrooms to consider, at a saving of $100 on each. This is a worthwhile change to make."

The architects are going through cutting similar costs where possible, to keep the project within the estimate, he stated.

The belt-tightening procedure is required because of the high increase in building costs between original planning and actual construction.

However, no necessary features will be skimmed in the process.

Pulp Perfume

The board heard a letter from the engineering consultant, regarding the chemical content of effluent in the local air, the provision of special filters in ventilating and air conditioning systems to take care of it.

Activated charcoal filters had been installed at the B.C. Telephone offices and at the Bank of Montreal, the consultant explained and the board was invited to enquire regarding their effectiveness.

Similar filters have been installed in hospitals in most of the pulp mill towns in B.C., including Powell River with good results in the control of the pulpmill perfume that is at times very noticeable.

Mr. Whittington also suggested a letter be written to city council requesting the installation of an enuculator at the main fire hall, which would set off an immediate alert if a fire alarm is touched off at the hospital.

In Sunny California Patients Dig Deep

By HELEN MITCHELL

CAMPBELL RIVER — Hospitals in California do not have hospital unions or insurance schemes. In this respect, they are 20 years behind Canada.

Campbell River hospital administrator Arthur Lightfoot said this on his return from a week-long course at the University of Santa Clara, conducted for members of the American College of Hospital Administrators.

He added that the average cost to hospital patients in the U.S. would rise to $125 per day within 10 years.

"The philosophy of American hospital administrators is quite different to that in Canada."

"Although San Francisco has a great population density, the largest hospital there is a 500-bed institution at the University of California," said Mr. Lightfoot.

He said although the majority of hospitals in California are now run with the aid of computers, there are difficulties in handling the great volume of information that is made available.

One hospital administrator

told him they were just destroying the tons of paper on which the mathematical statistics were recorded, until personnel could "get the hang of it all."

Mr. Lightfoot said the University of California utilizes carpeting to the fullest, laying it in place of conventional flooring, even on the ground floor and in some nursing wards.

"This has been in use for about two years and they're very happy with it," he said.

More than 300 delegates attended the course, including a number from Canada.

Mr. Lightfoot said the delegates from B.C. returned convinced that people in this province are getting hospital care equal to, if not better than, that provided in the U.S.

Three Want Top Job

DUNCAN — The top seat on council will be sought by candidates who list "a nice amalgamation" and "implementation of urban renewal" as their platforms.

Former alderman candidate Elmore Clark, 59, has had a change of heart and will run now for mayor. He said, "I am interested in co-operating with other areas and I hope amalgamation in a nice way will come about eventually."

Ald. Hamish Mutter, 57, who has been on council for seven years and is a business executive, listed among his definite plans, urban renewal in Duncan as soon as possible to take advantage of Central Mortgage and Housing finance.

The other candidate for mayor is Duncan Teen Town adult supervisor Jim Quaife.

The only candidate for the vacant seat of alderman is John Getz, who may be elected by acclamation.

Mr. Clark said he had been "talked into this (mayoral race) by a group of businessmen who think I have the free time, and that my experience would be of value to the city."

He is a retired pharmacist and businessman who has lived in Duncan for 12 years, and is a member of the Duncan Rotary Club.

Ald. Mutter is determined to continue a family tradition of serving the public.

His grandfather represented the area as MLA at the turn of the century and his uncle was a former North Cowichan reeve and Duncan mayor.

Other parts of Ald. Mutter's platform are: yearly street improvement program for the next four years; immediate construction of a third railroad crossing; assistance for the Cowichan Indian Band council in its attempt to develop Indian land; continuation of the city's beautification program; securing surplus CPR lands for development of parking lots and continuation of dyke improvement.

Ald. Mutter said "It would be foolish and unrealistic to state that taxes will remain at the present level, particularly in this day of inflation, but the ratepayers can be assured that very careful consideration will be given in the cases of increases."

Humor from Llareggub

By ARNOLD OLSON
Twenty voices lifted an audience of 100 out of their seats and to a far-off land, Friday night, at the opening of Under Milk Wood.

This play for voices was written by Welsh poet Dylan Thomas, and will be produced again tonight at Cedar Community Hall by Yellow Point Drama Group.

The play was not produced with a view to perfection or profit, but as a training springboard for the club.

As such, it gained the respect of the audience, which demanded the retreating actors return at the end of the show, for a curtain call.

The cast later gave credit for any success to help their group.
Owen Morgan and May Roberts were two voices detailing the life of the sleepy town in the shadow of Llareggub Hill. They maintained the rhythm of the risque humor to shine, in his poetry.

Third Man Enters Ladysmith Race

LADYSMITH—Dr. H. A. Bowker of Gill Road is the third candidate who will contest two vacancies on the town council.

He has lived and practised in Ladysmith for the past 25 years.

The other two candidates are incumbent Pat Ryan and newcomer J. E. MacDonald.

A past president of the Ladysmith Legion, Dr. Bowker has one daughter and one son.

He said "I never ran before and I shall make no specific promises during this election. But I think a municipality should be run by a good and sound administration."

"I feel I can make a contribution in this respect."

Seats Contested

COBBLE HILL — Six candidates are ready to contest seats on the newly-formed Cowichan chan Valley regional hospital district.

pany official at Crofton pulp mill, Eagle Heights, Glenora and Cowichan Station; Ken

McKinnon, building supply manager, Cowichan Bay; George Brathwaite and John Baines, both dairy farmers, Cobble Hill;
Dave Laverock, consulting electrical engineer, Shawnigan Lake; C. B. Meredith, chicken farmer, H. A. Warner, building contractor and John Bateson, insurance adjuster, Mill Bay.

Other areas included in the new regional district are Lake

Cowichan south and Lake Cowichan north, Saltair and Thetis Island, North Oyster, village of Lake Cowichan, town of Ladysmith, city of Duncan and municipality of North Cowichan.

The first elected and appointed board directors will begin their task at the beginning of February.

Mr. Justice Gould noted the Burns was given a year in jail, and prohibited from driving

'Near Panic' Buying Gold Rush Now Stampede

LONDON (AP) — The record rush to buy gold reached stampede levels in the bullion markets of western Europe Friday, reflecting widespread anxiety over monetary values in the wake of the 14.3-per-cent devaluation of the British pound.

Dollar Not In Peril

WASHINGTON (CP) — Firm confidence in the ability of the U.S. dollar to ride out the storm of European gold speculation was declared Friday by the managing director of the 107-nation International Monetary Fund.

Pierre-Paul Schweitzer, in an interview recorded for broadcast by the Voice of America, described as a temporary flurry the rush to exchange dollars for gold in the wake of devaluation of the British pound.

He said it will be overcome by the determination of the financial powers to support the pound and maintain their own currency values.

FULL CONFIDENCE

Earlier, administration officials avowed full confidence that American and world gold resources are ample to protect the dollar from following the pound into devaluation.

Presidential press secretary George Christian told reporters in San Antonio, Tex., that he wanted to underscore assurance that President Johnson would "reaffirm unequivocally" U.S. determination to maintain its guaranteed price of $35 an ounce to anyone wanting to buy gold.

To let the price go higher

In London, gold dealers said buying orders were arriving in "near panic" proportions from all over the world.

Paris reported sales 10 times above normal. (See also Page 5.)

In Johannesburg, stock exchange dealers jostled each other in their efforts to buy gold mining stocks. The scene was described as "near pandemonium." South Africa, as one of the leading producers of gold, would profit heavily if its price rose.

PAPER FOR METAL

The Swiss National Bank advised leading banks to halt temporarily forward sales of gold, for delivery in 30, 60 or 90 days, in a move to protect its supply of U.S. dollars.

The drive for gold was a broad movement to change paper money for the solidity of metal. The price of silver in the London metal market soared to a new high of $2.10 (U.S.) an ounce.

Behind the move appeared to be general uneasiness about the strength of the dollar and speculation that the price of gold may be revalued upward from the $35 an ounce the U.S. government pays.

PRICE STEADIER

In London the international gold pool steadied the metal's price by continuing to supply the bullion market with the gold needed to satisfy all demand. The pool was set up in 1962 by eight nations for this purpose. The United States supplies more than 50 per cent of the pool's needs.

France suspended its role in the pool in June and the U.S. took over its nine per cent share that France held. The other

GREEKS, TURKS 'NEAR BRINK OF WAR'—THANT

From UPI, AP, CP

High winds and low clouds obscured Turkish intentions as dawn broke over the eastern Mediterranean island of Cyprus this morning.

Only mounting waves kept Turkish invasion forces from smashing into this Greek-dominated country. At least that was the general opinion in Nicosia, Athens and in New York where the United Nations Security Council wrangled far into the night on the generations-long problem.

The Cypriots requested the emergency meeting of the Council to stop the Turks from invading. Ambassador to the UN Zenon Rossides declared "it is the knowledge of all governments that this weekend has been fixed for the unlawful invasion . . ."

Shortly after the Council met, Secretary-General U Thant warned that:

"The portents regarding Cyprus are increasingly ominous. Indications at the moment are that Greece and Turkey are at the brink of war over Cyprus."

After two hours of heated debate, the 15-nation council called a recess so members could consult privately on what action to take.

The Security Council met again early this morning after a 3½-hour recess. It issued a statement that called upon all parties to the dispute to abstain from any act that might aggravate the situation and constitute a threat to peace.

The Council also endorsed Thant's efforts in the situation, then adjourned on the understanding that its members should be ready to meet again at any moment.

FOCAL POINT

The dramatic call-out of the Security Council was the focal point of negotiations, however. Thant appealed for the gradual withdrawal of all foreign troops from the island, where Greece and Turkey maintain garrisons. However, he insisted that the 4,000-man UN peacekeeping force, including 900 Canadians, remain in control.

Thant referred to Greek, Turkish and British garrisons left on the island when it became independent from Britain in 1960. Under the independence agreement, Greece was allowed to station 500 men on the island, Turkey 750. But since then, the Greeks have sent an entire division of 7,000 regulars. In addition, they have command of the more than 10,000 members of the Cypriot national guard.

PRICE OF PEACE

Turkey has demanded the withdrawal of the Greek regulars and the disarming of the national guard as its price for staying the invasion.

Rossides told the Security Council Friday night that "my country is under imminent threat of attack and invasion by a big and powerful neighbor, Turkey, with whom we wish to live in peace."

Turkey's Ambassador Orhan Erpal quickly replied with a charge that Greece has been taking steps aimed at the annexation of Cyprus.

"The attack on the Turkish Cypriot villages (last week) has been brutal beyond description," Erpal declared.

Turks Promise Final Solution

ANKARA (Reuters) — Turkish President Cevdet Sunay today sent messages to world heads of state announcing that Turkey has "decided to solve the Cyprus problem once and for all."

As the messages went out, two-thirds of the Turkish Navy was gathered in the Mediterranean between the southern Turkish ports of Mersin and Iskenderun, which lie to the north and northeast of the eastern tip of Cyprus.

Sammy's Turn

Two days after friend Frank Sinatra announced breakup of his marriage, Sammy Davis Jr., said Friday he and his Swedish-born wife, May Britt, have agreed to trial separation. The inter-racial marriage was the first in Hollywood involving a top flight star. Miss Britt gave up her career immediately after marriage.—(AP)

Suicide Trys Growing

'Something Amiss' At Oakalla Farm

VANCOUVER (CP) — A University of British Columbia psychiatry professor says there is something seriously amiss at Oakalla Prison Farm in suburban Burnaby.

Dr. A. M. Marcus, in an interview following an address to University of B.C. law students, said Friday the fact that three suicides and 143 cases of self-injury were recorded among Oakalla inmates between January and October this year indicate that a closer look at the situation is needed.

Dr. Marcus said he received the statistics from an official assisting S. Rockborough Smith, B.C. director of corrections.

"Self-injury does not necessarily mean suicide," Dr. Marcus said. "But it does include wrist slashings and hanging attempts."

Mr. Smith said Oakalla was built 50 years ago to accommodate 450 prisoners. Now there are 950 men and 100 women being held at the prison.

Pearkes' Happy Moment

It's happy moment for Lieutenant-Governor George R. Pearkes of British Columbia who was one of 35 Canadians receiving the nation's newest honor in Ottawa Friday. He was invested as Companion of the Order of Canada. He smiles as he is congratulated by Governor-General Roland Michener who conducted investiture.—(CP)

Pay-Delay $250,000 Holds Bennett Interest

By IAN STREET
Legislative Reporter

When Premier Bennett talks about interest on the late flood control payments from the U.S. under the Columbia Treaty he is discussing a cool quarter million dollars.

At the 6½ per cent interest demanded by the premier, the amount still owing is $244,299.99.

DEMANDING 6½ PER CENT?

This covers the period July 21, when the Duncan dam on the Columbia went into operation, and Nov. 23 when the principal sum of $11,929,031.25 was finally paid. The hold-up was due to failure of Congress to approve the payment by the U.S.

Now there is a possibility that B.C. may demand 6½ per cent

Three Guards Face Charges

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP)—Three guards at Victoria County jail were charged Friday with common assault following an investigation by the Ontario department of reforms institutions into allegations that two prisoners were beaten for refusing to leave their beds at the jail Oct. 24.

interest on the interest that's still owing.

A government spokesman said Friday: "If you accept the claim that interest is owing on the main payment for the period payment was not made, but due, then you automatically must accept the claim for interest on the interest, for the period during which it goes unpaid."

PUSHED WITH VIGOR

External Affairs Minister Paul Martin, acting for B.C. in further negotiations under the international treaty, wired Mr. Bennett Thursday saying the question of interest settlement with the U.S. was being "pushed with vigor" by Ottawa.

Prices Cut On Cars From U.K.

TORONTO (Special)—Price cuts, ranging from $50 to $150, on Austin and MG cars were announced today.

Donald Pocock, executive vice-president of the British Motor Corporation of Canada Ltd., said the reductions resulted from the British devaluation.

"This move will further stimulate sales and is being made even though the full effect of the devaluation is not known at this time," said Pocock.

Savings will depend on the model of car being bought. As an example, the Austin mini-sedan will now sell for $14,493, before tax and shipping.

More Than a Minimum Christmas

Five and a half years ago a family of six left eastern Europe for a bright new future in Canada.

Industrious, careful and thrifty, they arrived in Victoria — father, mother, a six-month-old baby, and three other children, between 7 and 3 years old.

They worked hard in the community, and started buying their own house. As with many old-country families they didn't believe in credit buying, and soon owned their own furniture. A year ago they bought a used car.

Four months ago, the 35-year-old mother became pregnant, and the girls, now aged 13 and 9 were eagerly looking forward to the birth of a Canadian into the family.

Suddenly, two months ago, everything changed. The father, a heavy machine operator, suffered a severe mental breakdown and was committed to a mental institution for an indefinite period.

The family was thrown back onto its own resources, without relatives or friends able to assist them.

It was a sad moment for the mother, anxious and uncertain about her husband, as she sat in a Victoria city social workers' office and asked for help to keep the young family together.

The high hopes of that spring in 1962 were dashed, and she was dependent upon the government to help her out of her predicament.

Fortunately, because of past thrift, the family has no debts, and their social assistance income of $200 a month will meet their minimum requirements.

But the term "minimum" does not include a happy Christmas, although some extras can be provided through additional social assistance.

It is up to Victorians to show these new Canadians that they are welcome in the land in which they have chosen to raise their children.

Through contributions to the Colonist 500 Fund they can spread some of the joys of Christmas, and soften the blow fate has dealt the hard-working family.

By Friday the pace of donations to the fund was gaining momentum, with that steady giver "Anonymous" appearing frequently at the counter.

Martin Lauds Marchers

'All Canada Aware'

High-priced walker, right, draws jealous glance from lesser-sponsored master

Charity Brigade
May Hit 10,000

By MARK DICKINSON

Whether it was a mule or cabinet ministers they all were ready Friday night.

When the gun goes off at 8:30 this morning, an expected 10,000 marchers will start out on a 25.8-mile course, which the hardy will finish about eight hours later.

It is expected to be a perfect day for the spectacle. Skies will be clear, temperatures about 45 degrees and winds westerly at 20 miles an hour.

If feet don't tire too quickly, the mammoth Project 100 march will raise $100,000 or more.

Acting Prime Minister Paul Martin has sent along his best wishes for the marchers. A telegram received by the organizing committee Friday said:

"Best wishes for tomorrow's march. All Canada is aware of the significance of this event. Good Luck."—Paul Martin.

Premier Bennett agreed Friday to sponsor a couple of cabinet ministers in today's Miles for Millions walk.

The premier will pay $1 for each mile walked by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell and Mines Minister Donald Brothers.

He added a provision that in case either minister walked less than 10 miles in total he would pay nothing.

Mr. Brother's daughter, Lana, 15, will also be among the marchers.

Worth Something Less

But one marcher no longer believes a dog is a man's best friend and he has become pleasantly insulted over the matter.

Cadets at Royal Roads Military College have placed $3.44 on every mile walked by a black Labrador retriever called Champion Lady Matilda of Trotting Park (companion dog).

But they backed the dog's master Dr. Eric Graham, Royal Roads director of studies, for only $2 a mile. "So much for education," Dr. Graham remarked.

About 30 extra policemen have been called out to patrol the parade.

Three soup-and-crackers stations along the route will serve the hungry hordes and marchers are asked to bring their own cups.

Six army troop trucks will pick up drop-outs.

The walkathon will start at the Legislative buildings. The route passes close to every municipal hall in the Greater Victoria area.

This is the circuit:

Vans Tour Schools

Registration of marchers and sponsors continues right to the last moment — from 7:30 to 8:30 this morning at the legislative buildings.

No figures were available on the number of registrations up to 9 p.m. Friday at several downtown locations.

All day Friday, one of the six $15,000 mobile vans to be used in underdeveloped Commonwealth countries was on tour of most Greater Victoria schools.

The van, a student aid vehicle, will lead police and other public officials from the starting point this morning.

Marchers should take precautions to ensure they'll go the whole tour or end up in one of the rescue cars.

Here are some tips:

On the hike, take several short rests with the feet propped higher than the body. Alcohol massage is good, so is a fine foot powder.

Take it easy on the hike, especially in the first hour. After warming up quicken the pace, and then take easy walks intermittently.

Loosen shoe laces at mid-day stop and try a fresh pair of socks.

If you get blisters or other discomforts, stop and have someone call a rescue car that will be approximately within two miles of each walker.

Meanwhile, Dr. Lotta Hirschmanova of the Unitarian Services Committee, presently in Victoria, said she is optimistic about today's walkathon because "enthusiasm is a very thrilling and very good sign for Canada's future."

Price on His Head

On the money side of the picture, it became spectacular late Friday when Lawrence Wallace turned out to be a man with a golden step and a high price on his head.

The deputy provincial secretary has been sponsored to the tune of $34.55 a mile — a total of about $800 if he makes it all the way.

Assistant Commissioner G. R. Engel, head of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in B.C., will join the march. He said 55 members of his F Division staff are sponsoring him for $5 a mile.

"I don't guarantee to go very far, but we should be able to donate a few dollars to the cause," he added.

Saanich police are throwing their hats into the walkathon via one of their cadets, Paul Bragg, at $3.65 a mile.

As marchers struggle in at the end of the trek, the legislative buildings' cafeteria will provide refreshment. It will be staffed from 3 p.m. on by volunteers from the Centennial Committee office.

Legislature Man, 84
Expects to Go Mile

E. K. (Ned) DeBeck, the popular, white-thatched clerk of the British Columbia legislature, will be among the marchers today.

The pipe-smoking, 84-year-old parliamentarian said he expects to cover at least one mile.

"I've been practising for 20 years," Mr. DeBeck said Friday night, explaining that since he was appointed clerk he has probably walked 50 miles, in and out of the legislative chamber, behind Mr. Speaker.

He wasn't going to bed early—he expected he would retire about midnight and would still feel spry when the march starts at 8:30 a.m. today.

Mr. DeBeck's sponsor will be the Legislative press gallery, whose members will put up $1 for each mile he walks. He is an honorary life member of the gallery.

Welfare Bingo for Christmas

By GEORGE INGLIS

Victoria's shipbuilding workers have been driven to bingo playing by unemployment conditions if they want to have an adequate Christmas, a union official said Friday.

Unemployment and the spectre of a lean Christmas has driven Local 191 of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, the shipyard's biggest union to stage a "welfare bingo for Christmas for unemployed members," business agent Neil Hindle said Friday.

Mr. Hindle was pessimistic about the conditions in the shipyards. About 200 of his union's workers are unemployed, and no apparent prospect of a bright Christmas season.

Asked to comment on a statement by Yarrows Ltd.

general manager John A. Wallace, that shipbuilding is good for a long time, Hindle said:

"We have skilled workers thinking seriously about going to San Diego or Alameda, where they have been offered work. I have papers right here on my desk explaining the methods of obtaining immigrant status in the U.S."

PRIORITY NEED

"When we have something to do here, we won't have the men. Surely Mr. Wallace, as a businessman, is aware of the law of diminishing returns."

"It is impossible to keep good men, here on unemployment, especially with Christmas just around the corner."

Mr. Hindle said he feels the federal government has to put shipbuilding in a higher priority, "and an exporting nation such as Canada should be exporting in her own vessels."

'APATHETIC' MPs

The union official said he has been trying to gain some recognition from Ottawa for Victoria's problem, but "the local MP's are apathetic."

He said recent efforts on his part to obtain audience with the premier have met with no success.

A meeting of Vancouver and Victoria shipyard union officials has been scheduled for 10 a.m. Dec. 3 in the Boilermakers' Union Hall on Esquimalt Road, to discuss the entire West Coast shipbuilding picture, Mr. Hindle said.

RUMOR REPLY

Mr. Wallace's statements were in reply to rumors of further shipyard consolidation in this area.

With the Victoria Machinery Depot getting out of shipbuilding after 105 years and Yarrows being affiliated with the Burrard Dry Dock Co. Ltd. of North Vancouver, some union officials said the move constituted monopolistic control.

Mr. Wallace said, "We are going to make every effort to keep both yards busy. There is no thought of cutting back at one yard."

School Visited

Air Vice-Marshal R. C. Stovel, commander of the Canadian Armed Forces' training command, Friday toured Fleet School Esquimalt, discussing the activities of each division with the officers-in-charge.

'Evelyn' Only Clue

Elderly Woman
Forgets Road

The name Evelyn is the lone clue held by city detectives in their search for the home of a 72-year-old woman found wandering by Oak Bay police at Willows Beach Nov. 14.

Miss Rubina Garden cannot remember the address of the apartment she is sharing with a woman named Evelyn Mac-something.

Miss Garden is being cared for at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

She came to Victoria from the United States to visit her sister. Then she moved into a suite at the Roccobella Apartments, 777 Blanshard.

"Apparently she moved out of there Nov. 13," a detective said Friday. "She can't remember where, other than she moved in with another woman named Evelyn Mac-something."

Miss Garden took two suitcases to the apartment and later that day went by taxi to Willows Beach. That's where she was found by Oak Bay police early the following morning.

Miss Garden said she met this woman in a downtown store.

Miss Garden has a strong Scottish accent, is about five feet four inches tall with a fragile build. Anyone with information is asked to contact the city detective office.

Election Field

Saanich
Tussle Grows

At least 10 people will be tussling for the four seats on Saanich council in the Dec. 9 municipal election, it was indicated Friday.

Reeve Hugh Curtis is still the only person to file nomination papers for the position of reeve.

Candidates who filed earlier were Mrs. Leslie Belfit, Coun. Edith Gunning, A. W. Mesher and Lionel Speller.

The deadline for nominations is noon Monday.

More Seeking Board Seats

Two professional engineers Friday filed nomination papers as trustee candidates in school districts 61 and 63.

Candidate for the district 61 seat is Kennedy Smyth of 2601 Shilling Place. The district 63 hopeful is Stanley Philip Oakes of 814 Royal Oak.

John Armstrong, investment salesman, 813 Claremont, said he would also be filing for school district 63.

'Mass Medication' Charged

Anti-fluoridationists Friday claimed that the Metropolitan Board of Health is trying to pressure the Greater Victoria Water Board into using mass medication.

H. S. Thuillier, public relations chairman of the Greater Victoria Individual Rights Association, was referring to a recent exchange between the health and water boards.

The water board has said its only interest is distribution of water and whether that water should be fluoridated is the responsibility of other bodies.

Mr. Thuillier also cited a resolution of the scientific council of the International Society for Research on Nutrition and Vital Substances, which has a membership of 400 scientists from 76 countries.

It suggested that governments refrain from fluoridating water supplies, "which is actually medication, as long as the scientific aspects of the problem are not satisfactorily clarified."

Victorians Like
To Line Up
At Start, Too

By NANCY BROWN

Victorians are apparently more eager to part with their hard-earned dollars than other B.C. residents according to the superintendent of motor vehicles, Ray Hadfield.

"This is the only place in the province where there is a crush of people trying to get first to get their car licence plates in January," he said Friday.

"They know they've got to get them, and that's it," he said, adding that many like to get the early-available four-digit plates.

'Special Plates'

As in recent years, the lowest number obtainable at the wicket in Victoria will be 3-001. Numbers 1 to 3,000 are "special numbers," generally going to the same people every year.

If a specific below-3000 number is not claimed before the end of February, then it is sent to a new applicant.

For 1968, plates revert to the 196-66 blue and white color combination, and will have blue numbers on a white background. There also will be a "19" flanking the "beautiful" at the top, with "68" on the other side.

No Increase

Mr. Hadfield said the cost of the plates will be the same as in previous years.

"This is one commodity which hasn't increased in price, although it's becoming more popular each year," he chuckled.

The plates, which are made at Oakalla Prison Farm, cost about 25 cents each to manufacture.

"It's quite a mark-up they have," said Mr. Hadfield. "But the profits go to a good cause — maintaining provincial roads."

The increase in the number of plates purchased in B.C. is significantly above the national average of a little under four per cent.

This year it is expected that 850,000 licences will be issued, five per cent more than last year.

So far this year, the Victoria office alone has issued 91,570 plates. The original quota of numbers from 3-001 to 70-000 was exhausted months ago.

Mail Orders

The office has handled about 20,000 mail orders, but these are not encouraged because of the cost to the department.

Special envelopes needed for mailing cost 17 cents each.

Mr. Hadfield said that at present provincial government policy is to continue annual issuing of plates.

"We have considered long-term licence plates but won't be doing that for some time," he said.
